Union Pilot Stalks Out At Probe Of Air Crash

Bolivian Could Not See Big Liner, CAB Flier Says After Reenacting Flight

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

Representatives of the Air Line Pilots Association stalked out of the Government inquiry into the November 1 air disaster yesterday and charged the conduct of the hearings was "completely and basically wrong."

Members of the AFL organization of pilots left in a huff just before the Civil Aeronautics Board investigating panel finished its public hearings on the crash that killed 55 persons near National Airport.

David L. Behncke, president of the ALPA, issued a statement deploring the Government's failure to call as witnesses any of four ALPA members who served on the investigating team. This reduced the presence of pilots "to a mere and meaningless formality," the group charged.

Flight Simulated

The pilots' action followed a series of startling developments in the fifth day of the hearing, results of which will not be published for weeks or months. The five-man panel also heard:

1. An Eastern Air Lines Official warn that the "future of commercial aviation" hinges on the outcome of the inquiry.
2. The CAB chief pilot testify he flew a P-38 Wednesday over the course apparently taken by Bridoux, who crashed in a similar plane with an Eastern Air Lines DC-4.
3. The aviator, Robert V. Garrett, told how he "repeatedly" but unintentionally turned off his very high frequency radio volume while operating the controls.

No Record of Authorization

4. A witness testify that CAA records showed "no authorization" for the Bolivian P-38 to operate on November 1, nor was a certificate of airworthiness on the plane found.
5. That Bridoux failed to pass all four parts of a CAA examination for a transport pilot's license in 1947, although it was admittedly a difficult test.
6. That the Bolivian pilot presented his Government flight credentials and was given a "limited" license, permitting him to fly multi-engine aircraft without passengers for hire.
7. That Bridoux flew an old Howard plane in violation of CAA orders on October 24 of this year.
8. That the P-38, which Bridoux said had engine trouble on his ill-fated flight, was flown in the Bendix Trophy race in 1946 from Los Angeles to Cleve-

Supreme Court Ruling Means Cut in Bus Fares to Pentagon

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The 17,000 or so passengers who daily ride from Washington to jobs in the Pentagon and other nearby Virginia installations are going to get a fare reduction of 70 cents on each five-days' worth of tickets.

Just when depends on whether the Capital Transit Co. asks for a rehearing of a 5-to-3 decision yesterday by the Supreme Court upholding the right of the Interstate Commerce Commission to set the fare for journeys over the Potomac. That may be known in a few days. It could take a month or more.

Passengers who have stuck away in their desk drawers those 6-cent and 3-cent receipts issued during the long court battle which began in mid-1948, almost certainly will find them cashable. Some 71,200 of the 3-cent type and about 6800 of the 6-cent type are outstanding. If all were turned in, Capital Transit would have to pay out about $2500. But the big majority probably have been lost, transit officials figure.

On the fares, this is the situation:

Bus riders now can go from Washington to the Pentagon, Navy Annex, National Airport and other such Government destinations for 13 cents cash on Capital Transit lines in the District plus another dime on either the Washington, Virginia & Maryland Coach Co. or

Scheele Hits Slum Areas in D. C., 5 Cities

Tuberculosis Rate Here 99 Pct. Higher In Squalid Districts

Boston, Nov. 14 (AP).—Dr. Leonard A. Scheele, Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service, today pointed his finger at six major cities that he said have locations where "recent health studies have found cold facts that should cause real indignation."

In an address before the 16th annual convention of the National Association of Housing Officials, he listed the cities as Hartford, Conn., Washington, D. C., Birmingham, Ala., Cleveland, Denver, Colo., and Los Angeles.

"Here in New England," he said, "Hartford, Conn., found that one-fourth of its population lived in poor housing; the ill-housed one-fourth produced more than one half of the tuberculosis cases each year and sent nearly 40 percent of the city's mentally ill to State institutions.

"In the Nation's capital, the tuberculosis death rate among the people in its squalid slums was 99 percent higher than for the rest of the population. The pneumonia rate was more than 25 percent higher.

"In Birmingham, Ala., the rate

Montgomery Seen Seeking More U. S. Arms Aid

London, Nov. 14. (NYHT).—Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery of Alamein, chairman of the commanders-in-chief committee of the European Western Union, is expected to urge the United States to increase its military strength in Western Europe, particularly Western Germany, during his forthcoming visit to the United States.

Field Marshal Montgomery, who will be 62 Thursday, sails for New York aboard the Queen Mary on Wednesday.

Competent authorities denied today that there was any significance in the fact that Lord Montgomery's visit will overlap for a few days with that of Field Marshal Sir William Slim, chief of the imperial general staff, who will be the guest of the American Army from November 26 to December 4.

Burgman Ill, Judge Delays Charge to Jury

Judge Alexander Holtzoff yesterday postponed until 10:30 a. m. today the treason trial of Herbert J. Burgman, 53, after the defendant was reported too ill to leave jail for District Court.

Only the judge's charge remains before the jury gets the case. The defendant must be present during all stages of the trial.

Burgman's ailment has not been ascertained but jail physicians were reported to be making a heart test. Burgman late last week told his jailers he had "pains in his chest," the court was told.

New Life for a Va. Farm Boy

Blade, Woven Through Valves Of Heart, Cuts Away Stricture

Claude Sine, a farm boy from the Virginia hills, yesterday apparently won his gamble for a normal life.

A formidable operation was performed successfully at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore yesterday on Claude, the 14-year-old "blue baby" son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard R. Sine of Mountain Falls, a little farming community in the shadow of the Shenandoahs.

Claude Sine

Claude was different from the hundreds of "blue babies" who have been saved from early death by an operation devised by Dr. Alfred Blalock and Dr. Helen B. Taussig of Hopkins.

Because Claude was different, Dr. Blalock stepped aside yesterday so that a more suitable operation could be performed by the surgeon who developed the technique, Russell C. Brock of Guy's Hospital in London, now at Hopkins for a short visit as exchange professor.

A narrow defect in the artery which carries blood to Claude's lungs for life-sustaining oxygen reduced the flow, with the tragic consequences of easy fatigue and almost inevitable death before adulthood.

Dr. Blalock's operation—to build a detour around the defect—carried unusual perils in Claude's case because he did not fit the classic pattern of "blue baby."

So yesterday Mr. Brock (Brit-

'Repeaters' May Face Sterner Law

Centralized Data Urged

Stiffer Penalties Asked

By John London
Post Reporter

A new law making sterner punishment mandatory for repeated offenders may be recommended in January by the House subcommittee investigating D. C. crime and law enforcement.

Hyman Fischbach, chief counsel of the District subcommittee, said last night he plans to recommend such a law.

Fischbach, reached in New York City by phone, also said he hoped to discuss with Attorney General J. Howard McGrath the possibility of expanding the investigating and prosecuting facilities of the United States Attorney's office here.

The New York lawyer also revealed the subcommittee headed by Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.) expects to make a preliminary report when Congress convenes in January. He added that the subcommittee plans to hold public hearings in January and that announcement of the exact date and the nature of the hearings will be revealed in about two weeks.

Fischbach made these statements in the course of answers to a reporter's questions about the report on the disposition of aggravated assault arrests released yesterday by the Criminal Justice Association.

He said he had seen a preliminary draft of the report which showed that only 14.3 percent of those arrested for aggravated assault had been convicted last year.

Stating that he regarded United States Attorney George Morris Fay as "a man of the highest integrity who has made a decided effort to select personnel in his office with the greatest care and he has high caliber men in his office," Fischbach said the subcommittee investigators are studying cases "carefully, most carefully, case by case, where there has been a nolle prosse."

Fischbach said the probe subcommittee had not yet indicated why there was such a wide spread between the number of arrests and convictions for aggravated assault. He said he agreed with the association suggestion that a central record system be set up to indicate ultimate disposition of every criminal case, from police to parole action.

He said he was convinced some District laws were not being enforced. For example, he said, "I haven't yet found anybody who knows that the law providing that a judge can impose a 50 percent additional penalty, in jail term or fine, on top of the penalty provided for first offenders, has been invoked against repeated offenders."

It is now discretionary with the

Fay Abandons Part of Phone Removal Quest

Admits Withdrawing Some Requests After 'Evaluation of Evidence'

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

United States Attorney George Morris Fay admitted yesterday withdrawing some of his requests for removal of 326 telephones he said last March were being used to violate District gambling laws.

Fay said the decision to withdraw the requests was made after "an evaluation of the evidence" which his office had gathered against certain subscribers. He would not comment on how many requests he has withdrawn.

Telephone removal, as a weapon against gambling, was launched by Fay after a series of eight raids March 25, which led to the indictment of 36 men by the special gambling grand jury.

Fay wrote the telephone company that he had "competent evidence" that the 326 telephones were being used to violate District gambling laws. Many of the subscribers, threatened with loss of telephone service, sought injunctions to stop Fay from requesting removal. These appeals were carried to District Court, the District Public Utilities Commission, Prince Georges County Circuit Court and the Maryland Public Service Commission.

In Washington, in the first test, Fay was enjoined from removing the telephone of Nathan Miller, Avondale, Md., by District Court Judge David A. Pine last April.

Surprise to Three Powers

Acheson Due Today, Bringing Far-Reaching German Offer

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Secretary of State Acheson is due home at noon today after conferences in Europe that may have set western Germany on a new path of cooperation with the rest of western Europe.

He will bring with him the details of far-reaching guarantees offered for the first time by the new federal government of western Germany. The submission of this offer appears to have been the most important event of the brief meeting of Foreign Ministers which took the Secretary to Europe.

When Acheson flew off to Paris last Monday, in response to a hurry-call from Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin of Great Britain, the most urgent problem to the British, at least, was the ending of plant dismantling in Germany.

The Germans in the British zone were refusing to dismantle their factories for reparations. The British found they had to use troops, and Bevin felt that the western Allies faced a humiliating breakdown in the eyes of the Germans.

But Acheson had other ideas. So did Paul G. Hoffman, the Economic Cooperation Administrator, who had visited Europe and

Staff of Miners' Welfare Fund Drastically Cut

Drastic reduction in the administrative staff of John L. Lewis' welfare and pension fund was ordered yesterday.

The cut in the payroll of the United Mine Workers welfare and retirement fund was disclosed by Josephine Roche, director, in a letter to the 350 to 375 members of the staff.

Miss Roche, who has been administering the $100,000,000-a-year welfare fund, said the action was made necessary by action of retiring trustee Ezra Van Horn, for the operators, and Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.), the neutral trustee.

Lewis is the Mine Workers' trustee and is chairman of the fund. Van Horn resigned and Bridges demanded a court accounting to relieve himself of future service.

Pius Says Reds Parade Evil, Call It Virtue

Pontiff Sees Clash Between God's Laws And Totalitarianism

Castel Gandolfo, Italy, Nov. 14 (U.P.).—Pope Pius XII said today communism and other forms of totalitarianism were based on false laws, which represented disorder, tyranny, slavery and crime as patriotic virtues.

The Pontiff told the sacred Roman Rota, the Catholic Church's highest court, that a conflict between true law—the law of God—and false laws has brought the administration of justice to a crisis "in some places."

He noted the Rota's unconditional respect for divine law and said "it inspired in us the firm faith that all its members will observe faithfully the norms dictated already by us."

He said the major responsibility for the "false laws" falls on the "prophets or the supporters of a culture, of a power of the state, of legislation which does not recognize God and His sovereign rights."

A Vatican source said the Pope's statement supplemented the one of last week in which he told Catholic jurists they should not apply unjust laws or take action which

Russians Accused of Dishonesty By Austin

Vishinsky Charges U. S. Britain Plot War; Soviet Pact Bid Called Sham

By John G. Rogers

Lake Success, Nov. 14 (NYHT).—The United States, with a stern speech which accused the Soviet Union of dishonesty and treaty-breaking, rejected today the Russian demand for a Big Five "peace" pact and proposed instead that all countries simply rededicate themselves to peace under United Nations principles.

Debate on the Russian proposal was opened in the Political Committee of the U. N. General Assembly by Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky who, with a thumping of fists and a jabbing of arms, charged that the United States and Britain were piling up weapons and plotting aggressive war against the Soviet Union.

Warren R. Austin, American delegate, replied immediately, and asserted that despite untiring Western attempts to promote cooperation with the Soviet Union, the Russians persistently broke agreements, dealt in power-grabbing and abusive propaganda, and cut off their own people from normal contacts with the rest of the world.

Austin Calls It Propaganda

"Does the Soviet delegate contend that a new pact would initiate a (Russian) reversal of such policies?" Austin demanded. "If it would, then the pact is unnecessary. If it would not, then the pact is a fraud."

The American delegate used many a rough word to label the Russian proposal, which has three parts and which would first denounce the United States and Britain for alleged war preparations; second, tolerate no further delays in outlawing atom bombs and imposing atomic energy controls, and, third, call on the Big Five to negotiate "a pact for the strengthening of peace."

Austin said it was a "propaganda maneuver." He called it "an artificial olive branch surrounded by thorns." He denounced it as a "sham and a pretense." He called it "an attempt to slander, obstruct and deceive."

In effect, he said, the United States would continue to judge Soviet longings for peace and international cooperation by Soviet deeds—not just Soviet words.

Asks End to Hate Campaign

"If the Soviet Union wishes to undertake measures for strengthening peace," Austin said, "the means are at its instant command. Stop your campaign of hate against the non-Cominform world. Forsake your doctrine that the non-Cominform world is your enemy. Let your people meet with ours

Third Child in Family Stricken With Polio in Silver Spring

Th third polio case within two weeks in one family in the 200 block of E. Franklin ave., Silver Spring, where authorities have directed that a stagnant ditch be eliminated, was reported yesterday by the Montgomery County Health Department.

The latest case, a 7-month-old girl, twin sister of a boy stricken November 7, was reported to the department late Thursday. Their brother, 4, was stricken October 27. All were taken to Children's Hospital. The county's total for the year is 36.

Meanwhile, county officials are awaiting results of a survey of the ditched area by the State Road Commission, decided on after an inspection of the area November 2 by County Manager Irving G. McNayr and SRC District Engineer Edward G. Duncan.

It was agreed then that the State will lay drainage pipe to be supplied by the county and will grade the surrounding area to eliminate standing water. The pipe is on hand now, McNayr said yesterday.

The joint inspection of the open ditch followed on the heels of public indignation after the 4-year-old boy contracted polio. Residents complained then of the inability to obtain relief despite repeated appeals to State and county officials.

Last December, a young woman who spent much time with relatives in the section, was fatally stricken by polio.

15 Rescued From 600-Ft. Mine

Mahanoy City, Pa., Nov. 14 (AP).—Fifteen miners emerged uninjured tonight after being trapped more than six hours behind a fall of rock at the bottom of the Maple Hill Colliery of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company. The men were down some 600 feet and 3000 feet inside the shaft.

Edward Fox, general manager, said the men were trapped when a mine car jumped the track, knocking down supporting timbers and sending tons of rocks cascading down the passageway. The entrance to the shaft was blocked.

A crew of some 25 fellow miners with picks, shovels and any other digging tools they could lay their hands on rushed to the rescue.

The fall occurred on the seventh level of the mine where the men were working in pairs supervised by a foreman.

Fox and George A. Roos, a company vice president, said rescue workers were able to communicate with the trapped miners by tapping the rail leading into the buried section. The rescuers tapped on the outside and received an answering echo from the rock-trapped miners.

After emerging from the chamber where they had been trapped, the men were taken in a small donkey engine to a shaft elevator and then to the surface.

Warrant Issued for Boykin As Shut-ins Eat His Illegal Bear

Mobile, Ala., Nov. 14. (U.P.)—A game warden got a warrant today to arrest Representative Frank Boykin for having a poached bear in his deep freeze but the Congressman was reported on safari in Mexico, hunting mountain lion.

When he returns in about a week, the jovial Alabama Democrat and Washington party-giver faces trial in Judge Tisdale N. Touart's court on charges that conceivably could send him to jail.

Judge Touart issued the warrant to Game Warden A. E. Nall, charging Boykin with possession of protected game out of season. But Boykin left by plane yesterday to visit friends in Texas, then go on to Mexico for a lion hunt.

Rep. Boykin

Nall also had a warrant for the arrest of A. L. Webb, jr., a beekeeper who started Boykin's bear troubles by potting a 300-pound bear he caught in the act of slurping up his honey.

Webb kept his hives on Boykin's 100,000-acre shooting preserve north of Mobile so he presented the carcass to the Congressman. Boykin put the bear in his big icebox with the idea of taking it back to Washington as the main course for one of his Democratic Party feasts.

But Nall raided the icebox and turned the bear over to City Hospital where charity patients feasted today. The bear was prepared according to Boykin's own recipe. Reports from the wards said the bear was "delicious."

Lewis Waits in Vain

No Action Seen Soon in Coal Dispute

By the United Press

All sides in the coal dispute sat tight yesterday and waited for somebody else to make the first move to prevent a new strike December 1.

Federal Mediation Director Cyrus Ching announced after a White House talk with Presidential Assistant John R. Steelman that there will be no Government action "for a day or two."

"We'll wait and see what the parties are inclined to do," Ching said.

Lewis Waits in Vain

John L. Lewis sat is his office, waiting for coal operators to accept his demand that they come in and reopen contract talks.

But the operators didn't show.

After a day of conference, the Southern Coal Producers Association directors said that their position on the miners' welfare fund, for which they want tighter controls, was one of the major points of their discussion. The fund is maintained by payment of 20 cents a ton.

The Southern operators were preparing a case that could be presented either before a presidential fact-finding board; a Taft-Hartley board of inquiry, or just to Lewis when they face him again at the bargaining table.

Joseph Moody, president of the Southern producers, told reporters the directors would meet again today to continue to define their position on each of the points Lewis is likely to raise—or that a fact board would ask about.

Lewis meanwhile prepared to ante up with $1,420,000 to pay the contempt of court fines slapped on him and his United Mine Workers Union last year for failing to comply with a Taft-Hartley law anti-strike injunction.

The Supreme Court recently rejected the UMW's appeal of the conviction, and officials of Federal District Court here tentatively planned to hold the fine-paying ceremonies today.

The union was fined $1,400,000 and Lewis personally $20,000.

52-Day Mine Strike

The current dispute has already caused a 52-day mine strike. Lewis ordered the miners back to work last week, but they are scheduled to walk out again December 1 if no settlement is reached.

White House aides said it is a "good bet" that Mr. Truman will seek an antistrike injunction under the Taft-Hartley law unless the dispute is settled within the next week or 10 days.

Justice Department lawyers already are drawing up the necessary papers.

One informed official said Mr. Truman would rather use the politically distasteful Republican labor law again than see the miners go out again with winter coming on.

Other informed sources speculated, however, that Mr. Truman, through Ching, may first give Lewis and the operators the alternative of putting their dispute up to a fact-finding board such as the President named in the steel strike.

By The Associated Press

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday gave railroads in the East permission to raise passenger fares 12½ percent.

The hike was granted to lines operating east of the Mississippi River and north of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers.

The ICC said the increases might be applied on five days' notice to the public.

The boost will raise the rate in coaches to 3.375 cents a mile and in parlor and sleeping cars to 4.5 cents a mile.

The new increase will put eastern passenger fares 44 percent above the levels during the war, when the basic rates were 2.2 cents a mile in coaches and 3.3 cents a mile in Pullmans.

The Eastern passanger fares were last increased in July, 1948. The upward revisions at that time averaged 17 percent.

In addition to increased passenger fares, the railroads have had a series of postwar freight rate increases. The last of these, amounting to 4 percent, was in August in 1949. It put freight rates about 57 percent higher than the schedule of wartime rates.

The increases authorized are in basic interstate passenger fares. They do not affect commutation fares, which are on a different basis.

Testimony at the hearings was that the railroads hope the increase will bring in about $37,800,000 a year more revenue.

Chairman Charles D. Mahaffie of the 11-member ICC filed a sharp dissent to the new increase.

Mahaffie said that previous increases in the East had failed to halt a steady decline in passenger revenues. He said that this record should serve as a "warning that measures other than additional increases in fares are necessary if the decline is to be stopped."

In contrast to the Eastern increases, affecting about 61 railroads, Mahaffie said that Southern and Western carriers had only advanced their passenger fares by about 10 percent since the end of the war.

Joining Mahaffie in the dissent were Commissioners Aitchison, Lee and Splawn. This made the vote for the increase 7 to 4.

Capital Transit Says Wages It Pays Now Are Adequate

Present wage rates are "fair and adequate" and any increases would result in reduced service, a fare increase, or both, the Capital Transit Co. declared yesterday before an arbitration board.

Speaking for the firm, E. J. Heberle, vice president and comptroller, opposed the request by CTC union employes for 25 cents an hour increase and other benefits. He made three supporting arguments:

1. "Full justice and equity has been done to our employes and their present rates are fair and adequate."

2. "Present earnings of the company are inadequate" and "any additional costs must be met by reduced service or increased fares or both."

Heberle said the net income for the year ended last September 30 was $651,257 and is expected to drop to $88,200 for the next year, even without any change in wage rates.

A sharp decline in revenue, resulting from the increased number of automobiles and cabs, was cited by Heberle.

3. "The present fare structure is already high . . . as the result of wage rates going up year after year."

Heberle said wage costs had more than doubled in the eight years between 1941 and 1949 and the wage slice from each dollar of revenue has risen from 50 cents in 1941 to almost 59 cents presently.

In the three calendar years from 1945 to 1948, the net income per dollar of revenue has dropped from 4.8 cents to 1.5 cents, the present return, Heberle declared.

The company's case, which began yesterday after a week's recess since the union side was presented, was opened by Hawley Simpson, labor counsel for the firm. Simpson estimated the total cost of the union's wage and working condition request would run more than four million dollars.

He told the five-man arbitration board at the Hamilton Hotel that rather than a wage raise, a reduction was "indicated by the decline in the cost of living."

He said the company was not relying on inability to pay as a sole defense against the union proposal but that since the firm was not paying "a substandard wage," its financial condition "becomes increasingly important in determining whether or not the wage rate should be set higher."

Already Washington fares are at nearly the highest level in the country for privately owned public transportation, Simpson declared.

Pentagon Bus Fare Reduced

the Alexandria, Barcroft & Washington Transit Co. Total fare one way: 23 cents.

Or they can buy a joint ticket from Capital Transit for 22 cents and accept one of the 6-cent refund tickets. Up to yesterday only about five people a day were buying them. Everybody else paid the extra penny in cash. The 6-cent coupons, on the tickets bought today, are almost certainly going to be worth that much in a month.

Now, as soon as the rehearing question is out of the way, riders will be able once again to buy for $1.92 a book of 12 tickets—16 cents a ride. The 16 cents will again be divided—9 cents to the Virginia line and seven to Capital Transit.

Expected to Ask Raise

How long this will last is problematic, however, because the transit company is expected to quickly ask ICC for a higher rate. The 16-cent fare was set when District fares were 10 cents instead of the present 13. A 3-cent boost, thus in prospect, would bring the tickets to 19 cents each compared to the present 23 cents cash.

But pending any such request, Capital Transit will have to sell the tickets at 16 cents, a saving of 70 cents for a rider who crosses the river and returns five days a week.

Yesterday's court opinion reversed the findings of a three-judge District Court handed down just a year ago. The majority yesterday included Justices Black, Frankfurter, Burton, Clark and Minton. Justice Douglas did not take part. Justice Black read the opinion declaring in part:

"Transit's intra-District streetcar and bus transportation of passengers going to and from the Virginia establishments is an integral part of an interstate movement."

Black declared Capital Transit thus is part "of a continuous stream of interstate transportation" even though its own buses ceased to serve Virginia as of April 1, 1947.

Hence, the majority ruled, the ICC has the say on fares and not the District's Public Utilities Commission. The lower court had held the PUC had jurisdiction.

Three Join in Dissent

The three dissenters, Chief Justice Vinson and Justices Reed and Jackson, found "the stream of commerce theory inapplicable." They added that the decision "may have unfortunate results" because "its unlimited language sweeps into the hands of the commission the regulation of all local transportation that carries a large proportion of pasengers destined for or arriving from out-of-State points. For example, the Court's ruling would seem to include the New York City commuter traffic moving by local bus, subway and streetcar service on its way to and from interstate buses."

Capital Transit spokesmen said they would have no comment until the company's attorneys have time to consider the decision.

Strike Ties Up Stockyards

East St. Louis, Ill., Nov. 14 (AP).—A strike tied up operations at the National stockyards here at 10:30 a. m. (EST) today as the greatest hog receipts of the year, 19,000, poured into the pens.

W. R. Huitt, secretary of the St. Louis Livestock Exchange, said the strike was called unexpectedly by members of an AFL Livestock Handlers Union. About 400 workers were affected.

Huitt said loaded trucks were turned away after management placed an embargo on further shipments. No more livestock will be received, spokesmen said, until the strikers return to work.

Besides the 19,000 hogs, receipts today included 5500 cattle, 1300 calves and 2700 sheep.

Ship Strike Looms Tonight In East, on Gulf

The Federal Mediation Service said last night a widespread strike of East and Gulf Coast shipping seems probable at midnight tonight in a dispute between ship operators and the AFL Ship Officers Union.

A Government mediation session broke up early last night without progress. Another meeting is scheduled today at 10:30 a. m.

"It looks very much like a strike Tuesday night," said William N. Margolis, assistant director of the Mediation Service.

"If it occurs it will tie up most of the East and Gulf Coast shipping."

The issue is a union demand that ship deck officers, other than captains and first officers, be hired through the union on a rotating basis to share the jobs.

The ship owners have offered to strengthen a present contract clause which gives preference to hiring ship officers who are union members.

Capt. Charles F. May, president of the Masters, Mates and Pilots Union, said:

"We're notifying our people to prepare for a strike."

Other union officials indicated they would not extend their contract again.

Sen. Capehart Asks Probe of Miners' Pension Fund

Indianapolis, Nov. 14 (U.P.).—Senator Homer E. Capehart, (R., Ind.), demanded today a congressional investigation of "chaotic conditions that led to the complete dissipation" of the United Mine Workers' pension fund.

"The Government set up the original contract between miners and mine operators which included the pension setup," Capehart said in a letter to Senator Edwin Johnson (D., Colo.), chairman of the Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee.

"It is the Government's reponsibility to investigate the chaotic conditions that led to the complete dissipation of the fund."

Capehart asked Johnson to send a subcommittee to Indiana to investigate.

His action followed a publication of a copyrighted story in the Indianapolis Sunday Times in which Assistant Managing Editor Edwin C. Heinke said some miners who quit their jobs as long ago as 30 years received pension and welfare payments.

"Congress should step in and straighten out this mess and set up a new system that will be sound," Capehart said. "The Government has failed to protect the miners' interest.

"The fact is that the pension and welfare fund has broken down completely and, because the Government was instrumental in setting up the fund in the first place, it is Congress' responsibility alone to find out what happened to the money."

Heinke wrote in the Times that some miners who grew wealthy by running farms and stores—drew welfare and pension payments. He said "mysterious local unions" were created "to grant union cards to former miners whose cards had long been inactive."

Soviet Visa Denial Keeps Missions Out

(Eleventh in a Series)

By Joseph Newman

Paris, Nov. 14 (NYHT).—The Soviet visa is perhaps the rarest and the most difficult one in the world to get.

The visa system is exercised to deny the outside world admission to the Soviet Union. Moscow maintains it has a sovereign right to grant or withhold visas as it sees fit, and that cannot be denied. But in exercising this right it discriminates against other countries, and denies them a chance to examine a claim that it seeks to foist upon them—the claim of the superior Soviet man and the superior Soviet state.

Moscow is obliged by circumstances to issue a minimum number of visas to foreign diplomats. That is a concession it cannot avoid as long as it maintains diplomatic relations with foreign countries.

The ideal situation, from the Soviet viewpoint, would be to maintain large Soviet missions abroad without having any foreign diplomats in Moscow. This ideal is achieved in the case of a number of Latin-American republics.

In other cases, where the ideal cannot be achieved, Moscow seeks to approximate it. It establishes large staffs in foreign countries while keeping the size of the latter's missions in Moscow down to a minimum.

For example, the Soviet Union maintains a mission of 1000 persons in Italy, which has but a dozen in Moscow. It has 30 in Bangkok, which has but four in Moscow. It has several thousands in Ethiopia, whose Moscow legation consists of one or two representatives.

This exaggerated difference holds for most countries with which Moscow has diplomatic relations. It is made possible by a device against which foreign countries have difficulty in retaliating so as to establish relations with the Soviet Union on a reciprocal basis.

The device can be practiced by a totalitarian regime, but not so easily by any other kind. It consists basically of four elements:

1. Withholding and delaying the issuance of visas.
2. Restricting accommodations.
3. Maintaining an artificially high cost for operating a diplomatic mission.
4. Circumscribing and persecuting the activities of the mission to the point where it is virtually immobilized.

Moscow exercises its visa powers also to eliminate already accredited diplomatic personnel. A recent example is the case of Miss Anna Holcroft, an employe of the British Embassy. She left for a vacation in England and applied for a visa to return. It was never granted.

The Soviet government also exercises the power of the exit visa. This can amount to detention against one's will.

There is the case of Mrs. Donchakeva, a Russian-born scientist who had become an American citizen. She was invited to Moscow during the war to do research work. When she asked for exit visa to leave after the war, Soviet authorities remained silent.

Understanding the meaning of this silence, she sent a letter to her friend, Dr. Albert Einstein, explaining what had happened. She then mailed a note to Premier Joseph V. Stalin and another to Viacheslav M. Molotov, then Foreign Minister, informing them she was going on a hunger strike until she received an exit visa.

Eight days passed and the Soviet authorities began to fear for her life and the foreign reaction should she die. They stamped the visa and she left at the end of 1947.

The only foreign contacts in which Moscow is interested are those which promote Soviet foreign policy. For this purpose it authorized a distinguished Soviet delegation to visit New York and Paris to attend "peace" conferences.

The same motive is behind visas issued to friendly disposed persons invited to visit the Soviet Union. Recent examples are the American singer, Paul Robeson; the Chilean poet, Pablo Neruda, and pro-Soviet labor delegations.

The foreign guest is taken to a selected model factory (usually the Stalin automobile plant), a model collective farm, a model rest home, hospital, hotel and restaurant. All this is garnished with magnificent ballet, opera and music at the Bolshoi Theater.

When the tour is over, the honored guest usually leaves with a multitude of pleasant impressions and hardly any clear ones.

Acheson Has German Offer

Bonn, Germany, Nov. 14 (AP).—The Western allies intend to keep their troops in Germany even if Russian troops are withdrawn, a West German government spokesman said today.

The spokesman indicated this was one of the decisions reached at last week's Paris conference of the Big Three Foreign Ministers, the results of which have not been announced.

United States Secretary of State Dean Acheson and German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer agreed at their meeting yesterday on the need for keeping Western troops in Germany, the spokesman said.

He said the appointment of Soviet Marshal Konstantin Rokossovsky as commander in chief of the Polish army indicates Russian troops will soon be withdrawn from Eastern Germany.

Even though the Russians should withdraw their troops from Germany, the Russian secret police and the Soviet-trained German "people's police" would still remain, he pointed out.

talked with German leaders the week before Acheson's departure. Both men, together with John J. McCloy, the American High Commissioner in Germany, felt the most urgent problem was to tie Germany more closely to her neighbors and former enemies in western Europe.

The whole course of the Foreign Ministers' meeting in Paris was changed on its very first day by the arrival of proposals from the new German government at Bonn. The Allies had invited German proposals for ending dismantling, but what they got was much more important.

The Germans outlined a five-point program which went far beyond anything they had ever offered voluntarily before. They said they would:

1. Become a full member of the international authority which the Allies had set up to control the distribution of coal and steel from the Ruhr;
2. Promise not to hamper the work of the Military Security Board, which the Allies had created to guard against German military revival;
3. Get rid of trade barriers to the greatest possible extent; and
4. Encourage American, British and French capital to invest in Ruhr industries up to 40 percent, thus lessening the danger that these industries could ever again become the arsenal of a German war machine.

The Germans also promised to work for closer relations with France, and conceded—for the first time—that the dismantling program was less a matter of reparations than of security for Germany's neighbors.

In return for all these concessions, the Germans said they hoped for an end of the dismantling program, for an end of the legal state of war, and for an early review of the occupantion statute, which provides for review and possible revision within 18 months. If the legal state of war ended, the new German republic could station consuls and possibly higher diplomatic representatives in the former allied capitals.

American officials will deny that Hoffman and McCloy prompted these German proposals, although the ideas from Bonn bear many signs of non-German inspiration. In any event, the new Bonn proposals gave the Foreign Ministers something important to discuss apart from their old disagreements, and in a new context.

What attitude they took on each proposal is still a secret, and will be at least until Foreign Minister Robert Schuman of France has discussed them with his parliamentary leaders.

But from Acheson's public statements at Frankfort, Bonn and Berlin in the last few days it is clear that he approves them in general, and feels that they justify Allied trust in the new west German regime.

It is not yet known whether another meeting of the Foreign Ministers will be needed to approve the settlement as it emerges from the negotiations in Germany. Agreement may come so quickly—within two weeks, according to one informed forecast yesterday—that another meeting of the principals may not be necessary.

At any rate Acheson will have solid reason for satisfaction when he steps off his plane today. The meeting in Paris was inconclusive and tentative, in that its success will depend on the outcome of the high commissioners' negotiations with the Germans.

March From Reds in Desperation . . .

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

ONE HOPE—Thirty-five men, women and children, who had been ordered to return to the Soviet zone after illegally crossing into Western German, are pictured as they march grimly along a road near Celle, Germany, on a 250-mile journey to Bonn. They hope to win government permission to stay in Western Germany. Soon after the march started, three women collapsed. The others said they hoped to work for farmers en route to obtain food

Acheson Tells Germans Liberty Is a Commodity for Courageous

Berlin, Nov. 14. (AP).—Secretary of State Dean Acheson told Germans today the United States cannot export freedom and prosperity to nations that lack courage and will to help themselves.

The failure of China to withstand communism proved that, he said.

Therefore divided Germany must exert all its "spirit, mind and energy" in its battle for liberty and recovery. Such an effort will always win American support and tangible help, the Secretary declared.

Acheson wound up a three-day tour of Western Germany here in Berlin where East and West collide. He came by plane in foul weather, drove down the once-famed Unter den Linden in the Russian sector, lunched with American, British, French and German officials, visited the West Berlin city government and concluded with a four-power reception. He left by plane for Washington at 9:30 tonight (3:30 p. m. EST).

For the third time since he came into Germany from Paris, the Secretary of State told newsmen that High Commissioner John J. McCoy makes the policy statements for the United States in Germany.

Gives No Clews

He gave no clews to the decisions reached in Paris last week by the American, British and French foreign ministers in their conference on Germany.

His emphasis on this was viewed as a direct answer to British criticism of McCloy over the question of ending the dismantling of German industries and other economic problems.

He said McCloy has the full confidence and backing of the President of the United States and the State Department.

"A group of powers led by the Soviet Union is attempting to make thrusts in various directions which interfere with the whole environment of freedom and liberty which many nations still have and intend to keep. Now, these thrusts have to be met where they occur," Acheson told a news conference.

"Then there are problems which exist whether the Soviet Union existed or not. Those are the problems of economic recovery in Britain, France, in Germany, in southeast Asia, the entire Middle East. Those problems call for what we might describe as the most constructive part of domestic policy here and of American policy abroad."

On the China question he said: "The United States can help those people who are determined to help themselves. I was continually irritated by a phrase which was going around the States. People talked about the failure of American policy in China. It was not the failure of American policy. It was the failure of the Chinese policy in China.

"If a nation has got within itself resources of mind and spirit and energy to solve its own problems but is faced with some difficulties which are too much for it to overcome alone, then the United States can help. But if that situation does not exist, then all the help in the United States will not achieve the result."

Acheson Drinks Toast With Russian Leader

Berlin, Nov. 14 (AP).—Secretary of State Acheson conversed at length with Russian commanders in Germany during the reception which concluded his day in Berlin.

He greeted Gen. Vassily I. Chuikov, Soviet control commissioner; Political Adviser Vladimir S. Semeonov; Deputy Military Governors M. I. Dratvin; Chief of Staff C. S. Lukvanchenko, and Maj. Gen. Alexander Kotikov, Berlin commandant.

As Chuikov left, Acheson called for two drinks. The two raised their drinks and drank them in one gulp, a typical Russian toast.

British Seek Atom Defense Volunteers

London, Nov. 14 (AP).—Britain today called for volunteers for a civil defense corps to deal with any atomic warfare.

Home Secretary Chuter Ede said civilians who saw Britain through the summer blitz may have to "cope with vastly increased possibilities of destruction" in the future.

Active recruiting will begin Tuesday for the peacetime corps authorized by Parliament last summer, Ede told a news conference. He did not say how large a defense corps he expects to raise.

"This does not mean that war is likely," Ede said. "It is a commonsense way of insuring that our system of national defense is complete.

Two training schools already are turning out instructors for the corps. One of these, the Falfield School, has laid special emphasis on the possibility Britain might be atom bombed.

The Home Office is equipping the schools with fountain-pen-sized Geiger counters—instruments to detect atomic radiation.

Czech Arrest Victims Lose Their Homes

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Nov. 14 (U.P.).—The Communist Czech government has confiscated the homes of several thousand middle class business and professional men arrested here in a mass roundup last month, diplomatic quarters said today.

In addition, many of the men were said to have been permanently banished from Prague, in what apparently was part of a plan to make it a "workers' city."

The roundup was concentrated there, where the arrests were believed to have totaled between 3000 and 5000. It extended to some of the larger cities in Moravia and Bohemia, but did not affect Slovakia, where the government appeared to be more involved with the church problem.

News of the lawyers, engineers, shopkeepers and other professional men arrested on the streets, in their homes and at their desks now has begun to filter back to their relatives.

Diplomatic quarters said most of the victims of the roundup, aimed at eliminating the ramnants of capitalism, were given sentences of 18 months to two years. Many of their business enterprises were nationalized.

Western diplomats assembled a rough picture of what happened during the three-week police drive that began about October 2.

According to their version, most of the men seized passed through a central clearing point about 30 miles from Prague. There a three-man commission issued predetermined sentences at the rate of several hundred daily.

The men were shifted out to the labor camps, and new groups were brought in by convoys of police buses.

Most of them appeared to have landed in camps near industrial towns, coal mines or farm areas where they were put to work alongside laborers considered "good Communists."

Nearly all reports from inside the camps indicated that the men were well-fed and comfortable on heavy worker rations which are considerably larger than the average person's regular food rations.

Weekend leaves were said to be given to men of good behavior and a will to work. Relatives are allowed to visit those who do not obtain leaves.

The forms the men receive usually disclose for the first time that some have been banished from Prague. No mention is made of what will happen to their families.

De Gaulle Says Policy of U. S. May Turn West Germany Red

Paris, Nov. 14 (NYHT).—Gen. Charles de Gaulle said today that the United States and Britain were risking "a chance for peace, perhaps the last chance," by pursuing a "bad" policy with Germany.

He explained the risk by saying current American and British policy might incline German sympathies toward the Soviet Union, which could gamble with German nationalism by offering it frontier adjustments.

What "our friends in Washington and London" were doing, the general told a press conference, was maintaining "a certain number of apples of discord" between France and Germany.

In what appeared to be a reference to Secretary of State Dean Acheson's current visit to Germany, the general said "now the Germans are being told that 'everything would go along with you very well if the French were not always making difficulties.'"

De Gaulle's recommendations for Germany were:

1. Create a confederation of German states, instead of following the American and British road of working toward unification of political power and the eventual construction of another Reich.
2. Establish the basis for a Franco-German entente, instead of submitting to the Washington-London policy of delaying it.
3. Make a final and rapid settlement of the Ruhr, Saar and factory-dismantling issue.

De Gaulle also criticized the use of "several millions" in Marshall Plan funds to publicize the Marshall Plan. "Wasn't there better employment for this money?" he asked.

U. S. Rejects Soviet 'Peace' Pact Proposal

and discuss our common problems. Lift your iron curtain and you will strengthen peace."

Britain was cosponsor with the United States of the counter-resolution against the Soviet proposal. Austin described the American-British resolution as a statement of the "essentials of peace" and during the rest of the day's debate, it was supported by El Salvador, France, Pakistan, Denmark and Peru.

The resolution described the U. N. Charter as "the most solemn pact of peace in history" and then called upon all countries to refrain from threatening or using force, to honor their treaties, to promote observance of human rights, to cooperate with U. N. agencies and in all U. N. work, to remove barriers between peoples, to settle disputes peacefully, and to cooperate in regulation of armaments and international control of atomic energy.

Opening the debate, Vishinsky said the Soviet Union was pursuing a policy of peace and of opposition to those who aspired to "world domination." Who could oppose the Russian proposals, he asked, except the enemies of peace, the agents of reaction whose profession was to prepare a new war?

Vishinsky charged that from the moment the Russian proposal was introduced before the Assembly on September 23, the "leaders of the Anglo-American bloc" began fighting it. Meanwhile, he said, the United States and Britain rushed their war preparations and put their air chiefs in conference on how best to bomb Russia.

The aggressive character of the North Atlantic Security Alliance was proved, Vishinsky said, by the fact that Iran and Turkey were being associated in American military aid plans, and while those two countries were not of the Atlantic, they did have the qualification of frontiers in common with Russia.

He said "an ever-increasing network of United States air bases" was meant not for defense but for attack on Russia, and that American military personnel was being injected with "the poison of war" against the Soviet Union. The Soviet resolution, he contended, was designed to stop the "crazy or half-crazy people" responsible for such doings.

Austin noted the "melancholy pattern" of broken Russian pledges. In Berlin, he said, the Russians even tried starvation tactics in efforts to win their way.

Further Atom Talk Voted by U. N. Unit

Lake Success, Nov. 14 (AP).—The Special Political Committee of the United Nations today approved a Canadian-French proposal calling upon the five big powers and Canada to continue their private talks on atomic control.

The resolution was supported by the United States and Britain and vigorously opposed by the Soviet bloc. The vote was 48 to 5, with five abstentions.

Sweden Given Aid Despite Thomas' Ire

Sweden was granted $410,000 in new Marshall Plan aid yesterday in the midst of a hot fuss over that country's treatment of touring United States Senators.

Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) and other members of a Senate Appropriations subcommittee complained over the weekend that they were snubbed when they visited Swden on a tour of Europe.

Thomas said the Swedes had grabbed "some easy money" under the Marshall Plan. He declared any further aid to that country would be granted over his protests.

Swedish newspapers fired back that Thomas was a "liar" and that his remarks were "twaddling nonsense."

The Economic Cooperation Administration earmarked the additional $410,000 for Sweden among $8,328,000 of recovery grants to seven European countries announced yesterday.

The $410,000 is for the purchase of electrical equipment in this country.

ECA officials said they had received no instructions concerning possible future aid to the Scandinavian country.

Russia Gains $7 Million in U. S. Trade

Russia shipped the United States an increased trickle of manganese and chrome—vital war materials—and a lot more fur in September, the Census Bureau reported yesterday.

And since the United States let Russia have only $100,000 in goods during September, the Russians gained 7 million dollars in U. S. currency by the months' trade.

In contrast, the United States let Yugoslavia have $2,600,000 of goods while getting only $700,000 worth from Marshal Tito's country.

Current United States policy is to bolster Tito in his quarrel with Stalin by providing him with vitally needed goods—including airplanes and aviation fuel—while barring shipments of goods to Russia which might add to its war potential.

The $7,100,000 total of United States imports from Russia included $5,200,000 in furs and $700,000 in manganese and chrome.

Total receipts from Marshall Plan countries were $69,100,000, while United States exports to those countries totaled $289,300,000 compared with $278,200,000 in August.

The $69,100,000 total of September imports was well below the $73,300,000 monthly average for the first half of this year. Total exports, too, were below the monthly average for the first half of 1949 by 26 percent.

Commons Cuts Lords' Power to Delay Bills

London, Nov. 14 (U.P.).—The House of Commons gave final passage tonight to a bill that limits the power of the House of Lords to delay legislation. The vote was 340 to 187.

Under the bill, which is to become law within about one month, the Lords will be able to delay by only one year, instead of two, legislation passed by the lower house.

There is nothing the Lords can do to stop its enactment because, under the previous parliamentary act, they already had rejected it twice in two years.

The Labor Government forced through the bill in order to pass, against Lords' opposition, a bill to nationalize the steel and iron industry.

But even as the new bill passed, it was reported that the government had yielded to Conservative demands that the effective date of the steel bill be postponed until after the next general election.

The Labor Party probably will ask for the elections either in late February or early March.

According to informed sources, the Laborites still planned to put the bill on the statute books this year in any event.

The Laborites, if they won the election, could interpret the result as a "mandate" from the people for nationalization. In case of a Conservative victory, that party also could claim it had a mandate from the people and could knock the props from under the steel measure.

The Laborites, again, if they win, will let the law take its normal course or even hasten the "vesting" date—the day the law becomes effective—by amendment if they desire.

Originally the Labor Party's chief strategists had hoped to put the steel bill on the statute books and into operation before the general elections, which must be held sometime before next August.

The lords, however, delayed the measure long enough so that legal machinery necessary to put it into operation before the election could not possibly be made ready in time.

The steel measure comes up for debate again Wednesday in Commons.

British Workers Urged To Suspend Pay Talks

London, Nov. 14.—The British Trades Union Congress tonight urged Britain's organized workers to suspend temporarily all negotiations for wage increases. Unions representing about four million workers are seeking raises.

This recommendation was issued after a two-and-a-half-hour meeting between the TUC, special economic committee and four ministers of the Labor government—Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin; Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Stafford Cripps; Health Minister Aneurin Bevin and Minister of Labor George Isaacs.

Victim's Jaw Broken By Robber's Beating

Police last night were searching for a robber who 24 hours earlier broke his victim's jaw and took his wallet containing $4 and a check.

The victim, William Chapman, 67, 1330 Massachusetts ave. nw., was walking near his home at 10:30 Sunday night when he was seized and beaten by a Negro, about 27, 5 feet 10 inches tall and wearing a brown topcoat and hat, he told police. Chapman was treated at Emergency Hospital.

Peru Abolishes Official Sol Exchange Rate

Lima, Peru, Nov. 14 (AP).—Peru today became the thirtieth nation to revalue its currency since Britain slashed the pound sterling from $4.03 to $2.80 September 18.

A decree published this morning said the government had abolished the official rate of 6.50 sols to the dollar (making the sol worth about 15 cents) and thus ended the system of two exchange rates—official and free market.

The free market rate of the sol now is about 5 cents.

The decree also discontinued the government's practice of sharing with exporters foreign currency derived from exports. It also granted a 20-percent increase in salaries and ended all government subsidies with the exception of 150,000 tons of imported wheat a year.

Price controls on many goods except bread and fuel were abolished.

The decree followed closely the recommendations made by a private North American financial-economic commission, headed by Julius Klein, after a study of Peruvian problems.

Woman Judge Sets Sartorial Style, Lace and Frills

Judge Burnita Shelton Matthews, the city's first woman Federal judge, set a style yesterday on what the well-dressed woman will wear on the bench.

She appeared with a bit of white lace protruding around the neck of her black judicial robe, as she tried a divorce case in District Court.

The ornamentation is the collar of her blouse, turned over her gown and giving the effect of a lace ruffle.

ECA to Cost 5 Billion More, Hoffman Says

Detroit, Nov. 14 (U.P.).—Foreign Aid Administrator Paul G. Hoffman today said it will cost five or six billion dollars more to complete the European recovery program but if it averts a third world war it will be a "bargain."

Hoffman told the Detroit Economic Club that World War II cost 350 billions and that the total cost of the Marshall Plan program, when it winds up in 1952, will amount to 15 billions.

"If 15 billions will help us win the peace, it would seem to me to be quite a bargain," he said.

Hoffman said free European nations already have made amazing progress toward recovery and stability and that if this continues, "it is my belief that not only will the evil plans of the men of the Kremlin for world conquest fail, but they will fail so utterly that Russia herself will cease to be a slave state."

Hoffman said he did not see how the Kremlin could even consolidate its present position without gaining control of western Europe.

Given "any kind of break," he predicted, the "iron curtain" nations will "assert themselves anew" and break with communism.

would amount to approval of such laws.

He said then that some Catholic judges would find it difficult to apply such laws—an apparent reference to judges in Iron Curtain countries. He also said that on some occasions they would find it necessary to apply unjust laws to avoid even greater harm to the church.

In discussing what he called the "question of the true and false law," the Pontiff said that "the simple fact of being declared by a legislative power as the obligatory norm in the state, taken alone and by itself, is not enough to create a true law.

"The 'criteria of simple fact' is valid only for him who is the author and the sovereign ruler of all law, God."

He noted his appreciation for the Rota's unconditional respect for divine law.

The Rota, in addition to its dean, has 14 judges, of whom two are Americans. They are Msgr. Francis J. Brennan of Philadelphia, named to the court in 1940, and the Most Rev. William J. Doheny of Merrill, Wis., named in November, 1948.

The court rules on marriages annulments requested by Catholics, appeals on ecclesiastical cases or those cases arising in Vatican City, and is a general appeal court for any cases decided in other church courts.

Two Men Held To Grand Jury After Inquests

Two men, Elbert Scott, 36, of 1241 6½ st. nw., and William Robinson, 59, of 149 H st. se., were bound over to the grand jury yesterday by a coroner's jury in inquests into the violent deaths of Mrs. Myrtle Scott and Thurman Wright of the H st. address.

Mrs. Scott, 30, died Saturday in Freedmen's Hospital, reportedly as the result of head injuries suffered at the Scott home when her husband struck her with a metal lamp.

Wright, 38, died Saturday in Gallinger Hospital of stab wounds inflicted by Robinson, police say.

Arabs Say Israel Defies U. N. Orders

City Set Afire

Kweiyang Is Reported Won by Reds

Chungking, Nov. 14 (AP).—Loss of Kweiyang, effectively splitting the Nationalist mainland positions, was reported tonight by private sources.

The report, not acknowledged officially, said Communist troops entered the city at 1:40 p. m. and that it had been set afire by retreating Nationalists.

Capital of Kweichow Province, it is 210 miles south of Chungking and 240 miles northeast of Kweilin, the two chief centers of the government's remaining military power.

The Reds also were steadily approaching closer to Chungking itself.

The Nationalists officially conceded loss of both Chienchiang, a highway junction 130 miles east of this provisional capital, and Lungtan, 150 miles east-southeast.

While these blows were being made known, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek arrived in Chungking for the first time since this city became the capital October 15. He flew in from Formosa for a series of conferences expected to cover the latest military strategy, efforts to unify the dissident Nationalists, and the question of where to move the capital if Chungking becomes untenable.

Envoys of the seven Arab League nations complained to the State Department yesterday that Israel was "flouting" the orders of the United Nations and endangering peace in the Middle East.

Their visit lasted only 15 minutes, which meant that Acting Secretary James E. Webb had no time to do more than hear their charges and promise to study them.

On the same day, apparently by coincidence, Michael Wright, assistant undersecretary of the British Foreign Office, began a week of consultations with Assistant Secretary George McGhee and other State Department officials. Wright is in charge of the North American and Eastern departments of the Foreign Office.

The first day's talk covered Middle Eastern topics, although officials insisted it involved no particular problem and had no connection with the visit of the Arab League emissaries.

The Arabs' spokesman, Egyptian Ambassador Kamil Abdul Rahim, told reporters that the Israelis had violated U. N. decisions by moving their government agencies to Jerusalem, by incorporating part of Jaffa into the city of Tel Aviv, and by allegedly withdrawing their cooperation with the U. N. Palestine Conciliation Commission.

Israel's Ambassador Eliahu Elath, who visited the State Department later, denied every Arab charge and described the Arab complaint as a "provocative" act. He said it was "bound by its bellicose tone to stir up emotions and impede conciliation."

The British say they are troubled by the failure of the U. N. to settle the status of Jerusalem and to clear up the Arab refugee problem. London reports last week indicated that Wright's talks at the State Department would also deal, among other things, with the status of the Haifa oil refineries and the elections in Syria and Iran.

American officials look forward to the coming report by Gordon R. Clapp, head of the U. N.'s Middle East Economic Survey, as a signpost that may point toward a solution of the Arab refugee problem.

Clapp has not yet returned to this country, but an interim report from his commission will be submitted to the U. N. Assembly soon.

The American hope is that Clapp will outline projects that might give useful work to the Arab refugees in the countries neighboring Palestine. Officials here conceded that not much can be done this winter, and that for several more months, at least, the Arab refugees will constitute a straight relief problem.

Hospital Plunge Fatal To Winchell's Mother

New York, Nov. 14 (U.P.).—Walter Winchell's 77-year-old mother jumped or fell to her death tonight from the tenth floor of Doctors Hospital while her nurse was out for dinner, police reported.

Mrs. Jennie Winchell had been a patient at the hospital since October 25, when she was stricken with coronary thrombosis.

Winchell, notified in Florida of his mother's death, planned to leave immediately for New York.

Union Urged For Non-Red Lands in Asia

Tokyo, Nov. 14 (U.P.).—Maj. Gen. Claire Chennault, wartime leader of China's "Flying Tigers," said today that Japan and other non-Communist areas should be integrated into a single economic union to be organized by Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Chennault said such an "Eastern union" was vitally necessary, but added that so far it had received no encouragement from Washington.

Chennault arrived last night for his first meeting with MacArthur.

Asked the purpose of his visit with MacArthur, Chennault smiled and replied: "You wouldn't believe me if I told you. I want to thank him for three tons of desperately needed P-40 spare parts he sent me eight years ago when the American Volunteer Group was first organized in China."

He said U. S. recognition of Communist China "would have a very bad effect on the non-Communist Chinese as well as encouraging Communists the world over."

Bigger Rations Given British For Christmas

London, Nov. 14 (AP).—Food Minister John Strachey handed the British people an early Christmas present today: Bigger rations of candy, tea, bacon and cooking fat.

Strachey's announcement said the government also will increase the supply of ingredients to bakers for making cakes and cookies.

The bacon ration will go up from 3 ounces a week per person to 4 ounces beginning Sunday. Strachey said the bigger ration "will probably last some time" but that he may not be able to continue it through all of 1950.

On December 4 the tea ration goes up from 2 ounces to 2½, candy from 16 ounces every four weeks to 22 and cooking fat from 2 ounces to 3 a week.

The tea increase will be good indefinitely, but the candy and fat bonuses will last only Christmas month.

500,000 Greet Nehru on His Return; Bombay Mayor Gives Him $40,000 Seal

Bombay, India, Nov. 14 (AP).—Indian Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru, arriving home from a tour abroad, got a homecoming gift worth $40,000 today. It was a gold replica, studded with 60 diamonds, of the Great Seal of India.

He received the present from Bombay's Mayor S. K. Pail at a mass meeting attended by 500,000 persons.

He told a news conference before the meeting that his American welcome "was an attempt to show affection for the new India and I became for a moment the symbol of the spirit of a new and independent India."

He said that in the United States he was associated with the teachings of the late Mohandas K. Gandhi, and added that Americans "obviously did not know what they were beyond the fact the teachings were for peace and cooperation and for raising the underprivileged."

He said he had found a will for peace and cooperation among nations during his foreign visit.

Visit to America Revises Nehru's Ideas

Prime Minister Nehru returned home yesterday with very different ideas about America from those he came with a month ago.

A speech of Nehru's at the University of California, largely unreported in the East at the time, conceeded that first-hand impressions had changed many of his preconceived notions about the American character.

"The picture of the average American presented to the outside world," said Nehru, "is of a hard-headed, efficient and practical businessman, intent on making money and using that money to add to his power and influence. That picture, no doubt, has some truth in it.

"And yet there is another picture, and I think, a much more enduring one, of a warm-hearted and very generous people, full of goodwill to others and with a firm belief in the basic principles on which this great republic was founded—the principles of freedom, equality and democracy.

Real Strength Noted

"It has been my good fortune to see this latter picture wherever I have gone, and this has made me realize wherein lies the real strength of America. Everywhere I have found a love of freedom and a desire for peace and cooperation, and, among the people, a frankness and a human approach which make a friendly understanding easy."

This is exactly what American officials had hoped Nehru's visit would accomplish. They wanted to to supplant his former suspicions of the United States with trust and respect for American motives.

The fact that Nehru did not take sides in the cold war with Russia did not disturb or surprise officials here. They did not expect him to and they did not invite him here with any such conversion in view. They made no political or economic deals with him, arranged no loans or gifts of surplus commodities, and did no more than show American interest and good-will in him and his country.

But the conviction here is that Nehru's visit will be reflected in warmer relations and better understanding not only in India but in the whole of southeast Asia, where Nehru is looked upon as a great and trusted leader.

Nehru did not stick to official ceremonies during his three weeks in the United States.

He pushed a "baby buggy" around a super-market in Chicago so he could see how an American house wife does her shopping. He visited three farms in the Middle West and had a meal with a farm family. He slipped away from his escorts for unannounced and unplanned walks and drives around New York.

He paid particular attention to the colleges and universities, visiting Columbia, Princeton, Harvard, M. I. T., Wellesley, Wisconsin and California on his brief tour.

May, Garssons Lose New Review Appeal

Court Permission

Hiss to Probe Trips Abroad Of Chambers

New York, Nov. 14. (U.P.)—Alger Hiss won permission today to inspect all applications for passports made by his accuser, Whittaker Chambers, between 1930 and 1939.

Hiss' second perjury trial is slated to begin this Thursday in Federal Court. He is charged with lying when he said he never gave State Department papers to Chambers, one-time Communist underground agent, and never saw Chambers after January 1, 1937. His first trial on these charges ended in a hung jury last July.

Hiss' attorney, Claude B. Cross, told the court today that Chambers made at least one trip to Europe between 1930 and 1939, the period Chambers claims he saw Hiss almost every week. Cross said he wanted to find out how long Chambers was abroad.

Federal Judge William Bondy granted Hiss permission to study the passport applications, over strenuous Government objections that the papers were confidential. Judge Bondy ruled that the request was "not oppressive to either the prosecution or the Secretary of State" and might lead to the discovery of evidence essential to the trial.

However, Judge Bondy denied Hiss' application to analyze chemically the papers submitted as evidence by the Government in his first trial, to determine the age and type of the paper.

Former Representative Andrew Jackson May and the Garsson brothers are likely to enter prison in about 10 days as a result of another Supreme Court refusal yesterday to consider a review of their case.

A third appeal is possible but rarely used. It should take about 10 days for the legal papers to make the rounds and for May and his associates in the wartime bribery and conspiracy case to reach prison doors.

May and Henry and Murray Garsson each must serve 8-to-24 months. They were convicted in July, 1947.

In other actions yesterday the Supreme Court:

1. Ruled, 8-to-0, that a veteran's job security rights under the draft law extend beyond his first year back at his prewar job. Two veterans claimed they had lost seniority rights when they went back to railroad jobs in Kentucky.

2. Threw out, 8-to-0, a Postoffice fraud order against a firm selling a fat-reducing treatment. Justice Black declared there appeared to be enough evidence to support a finding that advertising of "Dr. Phillips' Kelp-I-Dine Reducing Plan" was misleading. But he said the Postoffice hearing unduly limited the defendant to cross-examination. Black declared the decision was "not to be taken as . . . a compulsory opening of the gates for floods "of medical volumes such as the plan.

3. Agreed to decide whether persons tried and imprisoned abroad by American authorities have access to courts in this country. The case involves 21 Germans tried in China in 1946. The Court of Appeals here has held they have access to the courts but the Army contends "delay and uncertainty" in military government and war crimes trials will result from appeals to the courts here.

4. Refused at the same time to intervene in the case of Friedrich Flock, a German industrialist convicted at Nurenberg. The Court of Appeals has ruled that that court was essentially an international one from which there is no appeal to the American courts. Justice Black favored granting a hearing.

5. Refused to take from the Court of Appeals the deportation case of Irving Potash, one of the 11 Communist leaders recently convicted in New York. The Government wants to deport him as an alien advocating its overthrow.

6. Received a plea from the State of Louisiana for a Supreme Court jury trial in the tidelands oil case.

Alleged Fighter Gets Bloody Nose From Housewife

A young man wearing a black chauffeur cap and a red-and-black jacket got a bloody nose yesterday from Mrs. Edward V. Scott, 43, of 323 10th st. se., who wouldn't particularly like to see him again, although police would.

Mrs. Scott said the man rang her bell at 11:45 a. m. and asked to inspect the room she had advertised for rent. He told her he and a "very close friend" wanted it. Mrs. Scott said the room was for one person only.

Chauffeur's cap said he'd look at it anyway. As Mrs. Scott led him into the rooms he said he grabbed her, kicked her severely in the back.

She whipped around, smacked him in the face, gave him a bloody nose before he fled. Mrs. Scott later told police the man was about 20, 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighed about 125 pounds and had black hair.

Defense Moves Delay Coplon Trial Opening

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—Not even glancing at each other, Judith Coplon and her dour Russian former friend Valentin Gubitchev went into court today as their spy conspiracy case was called for trial.

The actual opening of the trial was delayed, however. Federal Judge Sylvester J. Ryan agreed to hold a hearing first on one of several defense motions. The hearing began this afternoon and Miss Coplon's lawyer, Archibald Palmer, said it might take up to three days.

Miss Coplon, 28, a former Justice Department analyst, and the 32-year-old Gubitchev, a Soviet citizen now suspended from his United Nations post, are charged with conspiring to steal secret United States documents for transmittal to the Russians.

They were arrested together here last March 4 by FBI agents.

Miss Coplon said she was in love with Gubitchev until she learned he was married. But today, as in their previous courtroom appearances, they didn't speak to each other. They took seats at opposite ends of the long counsel table.

Gubitchev replied "nyet"—that's Russian for "no"—when Judge Ryan asked if he had counsel.

"I shall not defend myself," he announced. He contends that, as a U. N. official at the time of his arrest, he has diplomatic immunity. The Government holds that he hasn't.

Miss Coplon was convicted in Washington of stealing Government papers with the intent of passing them to the Russians.

The preliminary hearing that delayed the start of the trial was to get a ruling on Miss Coplon's demand for return of papers and other property taken from her by the FBI when she was arrested.

Palmer called as his first witness the FBI man who made the arrest, Robert R. Granville of New York. The defense lawyer said he would call a total of seven witnesses.

Bridges' Trial for Perjury In Naturalization Is Begun

San Francisco, Nov. 14 (AP).—The Federal Government started its third proceeding in 10 years against Harry Bridges today, and the CIO longshore leader remarked:

Bridges

"Here we go again."

The comment came from the Australian-born Bridges during a recess in the opening of his Federal court trial on charges of perjury and conspiracy.

The Government says that Bridges did not tell the truth when he said he was not a Communist in obtaining his United States citizenship in 1945.

Two deportation hearings, in 1939 and 1941 before Immigration Bureau special referees, ended in victory for the leftist leader of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union.

On trial with Bridges are two fellow union officers—J. R. Robertson and Henry Schmidt, charged with conspiracy in aiding Bridges to obtain his citizenship.

Nine men and three women were the first tentative jurors chosen for questioning among the 72 veniremen called to the courtroom.

Of these first 12, two men were excused early in the process of questioning on instructions by District Judge George B. Harris.

Judge Harris asked the tentative jurors if any had any preconceived ideas, if they had read publications such as the People's World, Soviet Russia Today, the Daily World, or the New Masses and if any were connected with the Communist Party.

All remained silent.

Unification Saves Millions, Group Says

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Millions of dollars in operating economies were claimed for the armed services unification law yesterday as the citizens committee for the Hoover report stepped up its drive to rally public support behind still unenacted Government reorganization proposals.

The unification savings were reported by Reorganization News, official publication of the citizens' group, as Dr. Isaiah Bowman, former president of Johns Hopkins University, accepted the chairmanship of the Maryland unit of the committee.

Dr. Bowman in a statement predicted "Congress will act if the people demand action."

"It is to everybody's interest that these far-reaching and enduring reforms (Hoover commisison recommendations) be put into effect as soon as possible."

The Reorganization News said that a Department of Defense Management committee, under Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, has been "hunting and finding real operating economies" under the unification law.

Aided by Robert Heller and Associates, Cleveland management engineers, it said the group has effected these savings among others:

Inactivation by January 15 of 34,380 motor vehicles at a saving of twenty million dollars a year.

Release of 2136 chauffeurs and 1060 recruiting officers for reassignment to military duty, at a saving of ten million dollars a year.

Parachute Joint Use

The publication suggested another $500,000 a year can probably be saved if parachute test facilities of the three services can be used jointly, and added:

"Other opportunities are seen in the consolidation of laundries, printing plants and office space; simplified procedures and less paper work; a standard reporting system for all services, covering flying facilities, etc."

The publication quoted a forecast by Heller that the management committee "can curtail needless defense expenditures by hundreds of millions of dollars" while maintaining military effectiveness.

Dr. Robert L. Johnson, national chairman of the Citizens, announced appointment of Dr. Bowman, one of the world's foremost geographers, to head the affiliated Maryland committee.

Johnson called Bowman "one of America's great leaders" and said his appointment will "lend prestige and authority" to the committee's nation-wide drive for the Hoover commission recommendations.

Bowman said that "far more than actual savings in money are at stake. Our very liberties and the future of our country as we have known it are involved."

The nonprofit, nonpartisan citizens committee now has affiliated committees in 38 States, which in turn are organizing local educational committees.

Approximately 20 per cent of the Hoover commission recommendations have been adopted, making possible savings up to $1,250,000,000 a year, the citizens group estimated.

Dr. Johnson predicted that up to five billion dollars a year can be saved if the commission's recommendations "are fully adopted and vigorously applied."

Alaska Fears 'Pearl Harbor'

By the United Press

Gov. Ernest Gruening of Alaska yesterday asserted that his Territory is almost defenseless and "could be taken tomorrow" by one or two Russian airborne divisions in a blitz attack from Siberia.

He warned that Alaska may be "the Pearl Harbor of the next war" in an interview with the magazine, "United States News & World Report.."

He said that due to a shortage of housing, the armed forces at present have only about 7000 troops in Alaska.

Describing Alaska's defenses as "next to nothing," Gruening said: "It is wholly vulnerable . . . we could be taken tomorrow by a minor-scale airborne invasion. It would be much more serious than Pearl Harbor," he said, "because once they were in, it would be a tremendous job to oust them."

Gruening recalled that the Armed Forces last spring asked 137 million dollars as the "bare minimum" for military housing, radar screens and other defenses in Alaska, but that Congress voted only 96 million dollars.

Blimp Pilot Says He Was 6 Miles From Airport

The CAA yesterday began a formal investigation into a report that a B-17 carrying Vice President Alben W. Barkley came within 50 feet of hitting a Goodyear blimp within two miles of National Airport Thursday night.

Goodyear Co. sources said the blimp's pilot reiterated again yesterday that he never came closer than five miles to National Airport, and was six miles away over Bailey's Crossroads at the time members of the B-17 crew reported seeing him.

The CAA took statements from the blimp pilot, Walter Massic of Akron, Ohio, from National Airport tower controllers on duty at the time of the incident, and from members of the B-17 crew who reported it.

The Vice President was en route back to Washington from Paducah, Ky. His plane landed at National Airport minutes after the reported near-collision.

Massic's statement also contradicted the Air Force crew's report that the blimp was unlighted. Massic said both his position lights and flashing lights (which flash on and off continuously) were operating throughout the flight, as well an advertising display the blimp carried.

National Airport towermen said they told Massic by radio to stay at least five miles from the airport and heard Massic reply that he would comply.

Continuation Of Draft Put Up to Brass

By Robert S. Allen

Pentagon policy-makers are in a stew over what to do about continuing Selective Service, which expires next June.

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson is preparing the 1950 military legislative program, and has put the issue up to the brass. From their reaction so far, they are blowing hot and cold.

The Army, chief beneficiary of the draft, is very hot. Army Chief of Staff J. Lawton Collins is pressing vigorously for renewal of the act. He submitted to Johnson a memorandum proposing that Congress be asked to make three changes in the law:

(1) Extend it for an "indefinite period;" (2) eliminate one-year enlistments; (3) eliminate the provision limiting inductees to those scoring 70 in the General Classification Tests. This would add considerable percentage of available draftees.

Collins' memorandum circulated among the Penagon policy-makers drew the following politic reactions.

Navy—"Interested."

Air Force—'Support in principle."

Munitions Board—'No objection."

Civilian Components Policy Board—"Request proposal be submitted for review and recommendation."

Agent Links Lewis With Unpaid Bet

An admitted numbers writer testified yesterday he called the Maryland headquarters of William "Snags" Lewis last March in an effort to collect a numbers bet.

Robert L. Williams, 1313 12th st. nw., told the jury trying Lewis and 13 others for gambling that he was known as "X-6" in numbers writing circles and in the vicinity of 20th and L sts. nw.

Williams testified he turned in his numbers to a man known only as "Jack." He said in addition to telephoning the Lewis headquarters he went there on one occasion with "Jack" to try to collect the bet. He said we stayed in a car near the headquarters while Jack "disappeared."

The Government contends Lewis operated a 14-million-dollar-a-year gambling syndicate from a modest bungalow at 4310 46th ave., Bladensburg, Md.

Despite repeated warnings from Judge Matthew F. McGuire that he did not have to answer questions which he felt would incriminate him, Williams spoke freely. He said he was no longer associated with "Jack" who refused to pay off when a customer hit the number. He said he was now associated with a man known only as "Humphrey."

Though Williams talked freely of his own activities, he balked on identifying numbers slips taken in the Maryland raid. After successive refusals to make identifications, Prosecutor William Hitz asserted Williams was a hostile witness. He asked and obtained permission to cross-examine his own witness, on the basis of alleged earlier statements and about signatures, alleged to be Williams', on numbers slips found in the Maryland raid.

Well dressed in a gray suit and blue shirt, Williams first gave his occupations as "self-employed caddie and general hauling." When Hitz asked him if he used "the regular numbers books in writing your numbers," Williams said "No, I use plain scratch pads."

Twoothe r Government witnesses welcomed the opportunity to refuse to answer questions. Myer Ehrlich, Lewis' brother-in-law and operator of the Ehrlich Poultry Co., at 1259 4th st., nw., when asked if he had telephoned in $10 worth of numbers bets on March 18 to the Lewis headquarters, replied, "No. I'm almost sure I didn't. I know I didn't," and then said he refused to answer.

Miguel Gonzales, barber shop proprietor of 127 R st., ne., refused to answer questions from Prosecutor Hitz, who alleged he telephoned numbers bets "almost daily" to the Bladensburg bungalow.

Hitz has already introduced in evidence slips of paper seized when the bungalow was raided March 25 on which Gonzales' name and telephone numbers were written. Other slips also montained such notations as "Mike Gonzales, 880.05." and "Gonz. 149.57."

Both Gonzales and Ehrlich denied they are professional gamblers. Edward J. Geraci, a member of the party which raided the Lewis headquarters. He was cross-examined more than an hour by Myron G. Ehrlich, who with Charles E. Ford, represents all the defendants except Lewis.

Geraci, who had previously identified two truckloads of evidence seized in the alleged gambling room, admitted he was unable to identify positively each of the thousands of slips introduced. He said he had marked large envelopes and placed much evidence in these envelopes. He said he could identify the evidence only by referring to an inventory list.

The trial resumes this morning.

Stiff Penalty Plan Offered

judge to impose the extra penalty, Fischback said. He indicated he planned to recommend to the subcommittee that the law be changed to make it mandatory in cases of habitual offenders.

He also indorsed the association suggestion that Congress study the problem of adequate personnel for the United States Attorney's office here, bearing in mind that the problems normally handled by a State's Attorney are part of the United States Attorney's functions in the District.

"I hope to discuss that with the Attorney General," Fischbach said. He pointed out that traditionally Congress appropriates money to the Department of Justice which then allocates funds to the office of the United States attorneys throughout the country.

"It may be necessary because of the dual function of the United States Attorney here to provide additional facilities not only for prosecution of crime but also for investigation," he said.

Grand Jury Impaneled

Rowan F. Erb, 54, of Rockville, secretary-treasurer of the Mutual Fire Insurance Co. of Montgomery County, yesterday was selected foreman of the Montgomery County grand jury for its November term.

Circuit Court Judge Stedman Prescott, who presided with Chief Judge Charles W. Woodward, urged the jury to stay within the limits of its duties and not to attempt to "tell the County Council and the Legislature how to run the county."

The duties of the jury are, he explained, to investigate the commission of crime in the county. He referred to instances in the past, both in Montgomery County and elsewhere, where grand juries had "criticized and made recommendations" concerning the operation of government.

He reminded the 23-member panel, however, that it has the right to "bring forth any crime anywhere in the county" whether presented to it for consideration or not.

Nine women were included among the 22 other jurors, whose names were drawn by Court Clerk Clayton K. Watkins. They are: Emma T. King, Lana F. Fritz, Norrine N. Dahn, Dorothy W. Nicholson, Ruth E. Dahlin, Margaret Mullinix, Grace E. Dorsey, Jane D. Gold and Caroline P. Baker.

Male jurors selected were: William M. Wright, Clayton W. Ricketts, George F. Garrett, John M. Tregoning, Claude C. Wright, Lee C. Warfield, W. Dryden Unglesbee, Fred E. Windsor, Stanley L. Baker.

D. C. Man, 34, Indicted By Jury on Rape Charge

Dallas O. Williams, 34, of 62½ Myrtle st. ne., was charged with rape in an indictment handed up yesterday to District Court by the Grand Jury.

On October 27, according to the indictment, Williams met a 21-year-old married woman and took her to his home after the couple had visited several places to drink whiskey. He is acused of forcing her to submit by threatening her with a pistol.

In another true bill, one of 68 returned by the grand jurors, Carlton Burks, 27, 1220 Maryland ave., ne., is charged with assault to commit rape.

Three men were indicted on charges of operating a lottery and possessing numbers slips. They were listed as Kenneth A. Blackwell, 33, 2425 Ainger pl., se.; Harrison Dixon, 56, 2015 First st. ne., and Roy Johnson, 1519 Marion st., nw.

Indecent liberties with minors were charged to three men listed as Howard Jones, 59, 309 Thomas st., ne.; James W. Fairfax, 76 2110 19th st., nw. (janitor's apartment), and Baker Brady, alias Bradley, 441 Temple ct., sw.

Silar E. Anderson, 36, no fixed address, was indicted on a charge of committing an unnatural sexual act at the National Zoological Gardens.

Four burglaries and one attempted safe-smashing were laid to Albert R. Williams, 21, whose address is listed as 2425 I st. nw., and Michael Contee, 21, said to live at 914½ 25th st. nw. Kenneth I. Lee, 22, listed at 2510 Ontario rd. nw., was indicted for unlawful possession of marijuana cigarettes.

As the result of mass raids on October 18, indictments for unlawful possession of morphine, heroin, codeine or cocaine were returned against a group listed as follows: Dorothy Gray, 4625 Central ave. ne.; Paul Gray, same address; Luther Merrill, 1212 4th st. nw.; Audrey Camphor, same address; Samuel Burton, jr., 742 2nd st. nw.; Bernard Hammond, 1155 16th st. ne.

Edward J. Matthews, 2010 Rosedale st. ne.; Seymour Adler, 6024 6th st. nw.; Andrew Norman, Dunbar Hotel; James E. Halsey, 1540 Marion crt. nw.; James Patterson, fugitive; James M. Roberts and his wife, Evaline, 744 Girard st. nw.

Leon J. Bryant, 261 G st. nw.; Harold Jackson, 1226 9th st. nw.; Amanda D. Garnett, 1740 6th st. nw.; Albert Braxton, 1322 4th st. nw.; Dorothy Martin, 1333 Kenyon st. nw.;

Phone Fight Eased by Fay

Since then his efforts have been upheld in "more than 100 cases," Fay appealed Judge Pine's ruling.

One of the removal requests withdrawn by Fay concerns the telephone of Harry and Bertha Katz, 3169 Walbridge, pl., nw., according to their counsel, Myron G. Ehrlich. Katz challenged Fay's right to request removal before the PUC. As a result of his appeal the tariff section, which pertains to illegal use of telephones, was rewritten. Further clarification of this section is now pending, as a result of an order October 25 by District Court Judge James W. Morris.

Fay said yesterday that when telephone removal was first tried in April the law on the subject was not established. As a result of decisions made primarily by Judge Alexander Holtzoff, Fay said his office had been able to determine what evidence was required to uphold removal in the District.

Decision to withdraw some of the requests for removal came, Fay said, as a result of this determination and evaluation.

The Secret of Popularity Is In Your Everyday Conversation

A publisher in Chicago reports there is a simple technique of everyday conversation which can pay you real dividends in both social and business advancement and works like magic to give you added poise, self confidence and greater popularity. The details of this method are described in a fascinating booklet, "Adventures in Conversation," sent free on request.

According to this publisher, many people do not realize how much they could influence others simply by what they say and how they say it. Whether in business, at social functions, or even in casual conversations with new acquaintances, there are ways in which you can make a good impression every time you talk.

To acquaint more readers of this paper with the easy-to-follow rules for developing skill in everyday conversation, the publishers have printed full details of their interesting self-training method in a 24-page booklet which will be mailed free to anyone who requests it. The address is: Dept. 7768, Conversation Studies, 1315 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago 5, Ill. A penny postcard will do.

Where's Elmer?

One bad-mannered tourist abroad can undo much of the effort spent in promoting understanding and good will. Senator Elmer Thomas has just proved this point with a vengeance. During his short stay in Sweden as a member of the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee investigating foreign aid, Mr. Thomas apparently concluded that he had not been paid a proper deference. So, considering himself the victim of a "snub," he lashed out at Sweden as a country which had "helped no one in the last 135 years," where anyone in military uniform is a spy, and which had "grabbed" some easy money.

Swedish newspapers, responding to the oversensitiveness which is a national characteristic, retorted with considerable heat, and we would be the last to say that they had no provocation. Senator Thomas' reference to Swedish neutrality when American policy is directed at keeping the door open to Sweden into the Atlantic Alliance is enough to make the persons charged with American diplomacy weep with chagrin. Sweden, moreover, may have been neutral, but she has been open-handed in her generosity, with money, food and hospitality to refugees. As for easy money, Sweden is receiving no direct ECA grants this year, the 48 million dollars earmarked for Sweden being conditional aid—conditional on moves by Sweden to expand intra-European trade. Congress would be in a poor position to legislate intelligently if the reports of its emissaries were based on personal pique or the number of cocktail parties they attend.

Poverty And Ignorance

A report prepared by the staff of the Joint Committee on the Economic Report gives emphasis to the obvious relationship between low incomes and lack of educational opportunity. Almost one third of the families in the country, or 10 million of them, have incomes of less than $2000 a year. Within this group, the committee found serious educational deficiencies. Of the nonfarm family heads between the ages of 25 and 64 years, 64 percent had had only grade-school education or less. Only 6 percent had gone beyond high school.

It is probable, of course, that a great many in this category lack education because they were too indolent or deficient in intellect to acquire it. On the other hand, it is certain that the lack of educational opportunity has kept an enormous number of people in the low-income bracket. "Low incomes," as the report points out, "result from lack of education and lack of education for the next generation results from the low incomes of the present, a process that tends to stratify the population."

The low-income problem is one that must be attacked from many different angles. In some measure it reflects poor health. To some extent also it reflects the demoralization that comes of living in the slums. But the Joint Committee on the Economic Report has good reason to emphasize the part that lack of education plays in poverty. Among the persons of low income are a million and a half in need of vocational rehabilitation. Here is an appalling waste of manpower. There is an even larger wastage among the capable persons who have never had an opportunity for education in the modern sense of the word.

The report ought to put new pressure behind the aid-to-education bill. For while better education can raise living standards only in the next generation, it is a far more satisfactory method of attacking the problem than the fixing of artificial farm prices and the payment of subsidies and special benefits. In the long run the best type of aid to the underprivileged is always that which helps them to help themselves.

Violence Backfires

When an election to determine the collective bargaining agent of the employes of a New York store resulted in misrepresentation, assaults and intimidation, a hearing examiner for the National Labor Relations Board condoned that conduct. Admitting that it was "very close to the extreme limits of permissive conduct," he nevertheless accepted it as something that the "sophisticated employes" in the New York labor movement were quite accustomed to. We think that the NLRB panel which heard the case is to be commended for spanking the examiner and unanimously reversing his conclusion.

In addition to threatening employes with loss of their jobs if the independent Department Store Employes Union did not win, the campaigning officials were found to have indulged in physical violence. As a group of employes were leaving the store, they were also falsely told that it would be futile to vote because the polls were closed. These activities, the board said, went "far beyond the limits of legitimate electioneering." As a result of its inexcusable conduct, the winning union finds the election results set aside and its unfair practices widely publicized. This clear thinking and courageous action on the part of the NLRB is a salutary warning to unions that they cannot win elections by violence and trickery.

Atomic Inspection

It is self-evident in the context of contemporary international tension and distrust that any agreement to limit the production and forbid the use of atomic bombs as war weapons must be buttressed by a system of inspection. No mere self-denying compact or "gentleman's agreement" can check the atomic arms race or dispel the fear of an atomic attack. It is no less plain, however, that a system of inspection must be cast within the framework of an agreement limiting production. Inspection can be meaningful—that is, reassuring rather than alarming—only as it determines that the limits agreed upon are not exceeded.

It is the setting of limits rather than the acceptance of inspection that appears to be the Soviet Union's sticking point. Before the Special Political Committee of the U. N. General Assembly on Saturday, Andrei Vishinsky restated his country's willingness to let international inspectors come inside the Soviet borders, "smell the materials, touch them, feel them, do anything they want or desire" and, in addition, lay down "the technical rules which the control body will deem it essential to prescribe for an honest implementation in good faith." But he insists that inspection be "periodic" rather than "continuous."

This seems to us an offer that deserves exploration before derision. If it is less than ideal, it offers, nevertheless, a large measure of inspection—perhaps as large a measure as the United States would be willing to accept within its own frontiers. It is not necessary to have inspectors on the spot all the time to make inspection effective. What Mr. Vishinsky means by "periodic" is perhaps worth examining more closely.

Even more important, of course, is the matter of what the inspectors are to be allowed to inspect. The United States would probably be quite as reluctant as the U. S. S. R. to have them poking into every laboratory and military installation in the country. Nor is there any need to do so. Facilities for the production of fissionables are too large to be concealed and too costly to be numerous. Moreover, as James R. Newman has suggested, an inspection of uranium mining operations, assuming that a comprehensive geological survey has been made, can serve to indicate pretty reliably the volume of production.

Mr. Vishinsky insisted that the Soviet Union's "tremendous and growing" requirements of atomic energy for peaceful purposes would forbid acceptance of the proposed system of alloting nuclear materials to countries by quotas. Since the Soviet Union would be in a minority position on any control commission, this seems understandable enough. It does not, however, preclude independent bargaining to determine whether a production quota for the Soviet Union cannot be determined that will be satisfactory to that country and to the rest of the world as well. If the United States and the Soviet Union could once agree upon respective limits for the production of fissionable material, inspection would become practicable and the essence of control would be achieved.

The need now, the compelling need, is for negotiation to determine if compromise and accommodation are possible. This is a perilous time for attitudinizing, for doctrinaire proposals and counterproposals. Mr. Vishinsky's statement may be mere propaganda; it may present no basis for a rational agreement. But it ought not to be dismissed as such without the most patient and conscientious investigation. Even qualified inspection and qualified control are infinitely preferable to the present headlong race toward destruction. The need of the world now is not so much for perfection as for the beginning of rationality.

Dudgeon a la Russe

One of the more highly favored words of the Victorian novelists was "dudgeon." When they wished to indicate that the sensibilities or amour-propre of one character had been affronted by another, they would write: "Having said this, Lady Twillingstone retired in high dudgeon"; or: "All who were watching Lord Gervaise, as he mounted that morning for the hunt, perceived that he was for some reason in a state of great dudgeon."

It is a very interesting word because for one thing nobody seems quite certain of its meaning, although it is usually defined as "ill-humor" or "angry resentment" or something of that sort. It seems, however, to have represented some special refinement of those emotions peculiar to the upper and upper-middle classes, for one rarely reads of dudgeon among grooms, chambermaids, game wardens, muffin men, crossing sweepers, or chimneysweeps, who were likely to be merely "surly" or "aggrieved" or "impertinent."

"Dudgeon" is also interesting as one of the few English words (another, by the way, is "dog") whose etymological origins have completely baffled the lexicographers. Yet it has been in literary usage since the early sixteenth century. The amateur etymology which seeks to derive it from Welsh dygen, meaning malice or vindictiveness, is dismissed with scornful dudgeon by the editors of the Oxford English Dictionary. It is not even known whether the word is in any way cognate with an identically spelled word, meaning some kind of wood, possibly box. Thus Macbeth in the famous apostrophe to his dagger says > and on thy blade and dudgeon gouts of blood,

> Which was not so before.

And so we know that the weapon wherewith King Duncan was dispatched "to heaven or to hell" had a wooden hilt.

"Dudgeon," even in the commoner sense, has gone out of fashion of late, which is often the way with words overworked by a previous generation. It is, however, much too useful a word to be allowed to become obsolete. For example, it perfectly describes the attitude of M. Panyushkin, the Soviet Ambassador, when he stalked out of the Social Committee of the United Nations to indicate his indignation over the rude and ill-bred complaints of the Yugoslav delegate, M. Vladimir Dedijer, concerning Red army troop movements in the frontiers of Marshal Tito's demesne. "I consider it," said M. Panyushkin icily, "beneath my dignity to answer the slanders of the representative of the Tito clique." Whereupon he withdrew in high dudgeon.

Bearing in mind what we said earlier about dudgeon being a kind of aristocratic emotion, M. Panyushkin's attitude seems to support the assertion frequently heard nowadays that the present ruling coterie in Russia is seeking to perpetuate itself as a kind of hereditary ruling caste and that its members are now seeking to acquire the hauteur appropriate to such a station.

Spies And The U. N.

When the United Nations was created, the founders set forth in the Charter the aim that the secretariat be composed of men of "the highest standards of efficiency, competence, and integrity." The founders must have assumed that the secretary-general would be amazingly successful in choosing only men of this caliber; for they made no provision for the trial of personnel of the secretariat in case crimes should be committed by them. Because of that defect Valentine Gubitchev, former United Nations employe, is now on trial before a Federal court in New York for allegedly conspiring with Judith Coplon to pass secret American documents into the hands of the Russians.

The Russians have claimed that Gubitchev has diplomatic immunity that protects him from trial in American courts. That is obviously nonsense, for Gubitchev had been a member of the U. N. secretariat for 2½ years at the time of his arrest. The Charter makes it unmistakably plain that employes of the secretariat have no obligation to any individual government. Such employes, the Charter provides, "shall refrain from any action which might reflect on their position as international officials responsible only to the organization."

When any U. N. employe, in disregard of this obligation, indulges in spying, he certainly ought to be disciplined and dismissed. The question is how the discipline shall be applied. We have previously pointed out that if each country undertakes to punish U. N. personnel for wrong-doing within its own borders that organization may be seriously embarrassed in the performance of its duties. An iron-curtain country might arrest the secretary-general or members of investigating commissions and put them on trial. It is not enough to say that most of the U. N. personnel is above suspicion; for some of the member countries are adept at manufacturing charges when no offense has been committed.

For this reason, it seems to us, an agreement ought to be reached as to how the cases of accused employes and representatives of the U. N. are to be handled. They cannot be tried before the World Court, because its statute permits it to take only cases involving states. In the absence of any other international court, perhaps such cases will have to be handled in national tribunals. But we think the problem ought to be fully explored with the object of protecting the U. N. as well as safeguarding our security. Meanwhile the U. N. is under heavy obligation to keep its staff free from spies working in the interests of individual countries.

Gold Where You Find It

A month ago the lately booming, if somewhat unstable, community of Fishwheel, Alaska, was not even a spot on the map. It was, as its name rather dully implies, the site of a wheel used to dredge fish out of the Yukon River some 160 miles from Fairbanks. Then one day a fisherman turned up what was—or what he thought was—a gold nugget.

With a rapidity excelled only by a pedestrian crossing a New York street, the word spread. Sourdoughs began descending on Fairbanks, and, unlike those of two generations ago, by taxicab and airplane, for even the streamliners which the Alaska Railroad now boasts were too slow for the get-rich-quick. At Fairbanks a number of prospectors succeeded in hiring bush pilots to fly them to Fishwheel. Ladies of dubious background also started out, presumably not just for the ride, and one company sought to provide Fishwheel with such other conveniences as dice and roulette. The rip-roaring tent city, spreading some nine miles along the edge of the Arctic Circle, also has contributed to folklore a character with the intriguing name of 'Ramblin' Sam" Gamblin.

Alas, the reports of a gold bonanza now seem to have been somewhat exaggerated, and there are even a few nasty implications that the "strike" may have been a "plant" or a stunt by some energetic chamber of commerce. But the frantic rush to stake out claims indicates that, whatever the geologists may say about the likelihood of "veins," the yellow stuff continues to exert an attraction that defies zero temperature or logic.

Dow's Curse

The piece in your issue of November 1 about the death of the lone survivor of Jacksonboro, Ga., a town accursed by Lorenzo Dow, had more than a touch of local interest, for Lorenzo Dow himself died and was buried in Georgetown.

The story from Georgia is a nice blend of fact and fancy. Lorenzo Dow was a famous evangelist in his day. While it is altogether probable that he did preach in Jacksonboro, and that he did shake its dust from his boots and curse the town, he was not, as the story implies, a little hunchbacked mountain preacher. Instead he was a Connecticut Yankee, born 1777, died 1834, and "the most prominent itinerant preacher in the early years of the 19th century." He crisscrossed this country and toured Canada, and the British Isles preaching the wrath to come.

Up around Romney, W. Va., the story is still told of how this redoubtable Dow at one of his famous bush meetings after careful instructions had hidden a boy with a big dinner horn high in a tree under which he was holding forth, and then at the climax of his sermon when he had whipped his listeners into near hysteria by his description of the final judgment, called loudly, "Gabriel, blow your horn!" Whereupon the lad tooted a mighty toot and the congregation went into a frenzy of fright. After awhile Dow quieted the crowd, explained his hoax by calling attention to the boy, horn in hand now making his way down the tree, and pointed the inevitable moral that if they were so scared by a tin horn, what would they do at the sound of Gabriel's trumpet on the last day!

The Rev. Lorenzo Dow died in Georgetown, D. C., and, according to Charles Coleman Sellers in Lorenzo Dow, Bearer of the Word, was buried by the Potomac Lodge of Masons in the old burying ground, now a playground, at 35th and Q sts. nw. Only a short time ago, and by pure chance, I came upon his grave and flat gravestone in Oak Hill Cemetery to which place the remains and the stone had evidently been removed from the old cemetery as were others several years ago.

Inter-Group Education

Mr. C. Melvin Sharpe's proposal that we abolish junior high schools, was, I presume his unofficial opinion. I submit the plan has merit.

Many will not concur with the reasons advanced for putting the ninth grade back in the senior high school. The fact that there is so much vacant space in senior white high schools—and even in some junior high schools—is not so sound a reason for reverting to the 8-4 plan as some others. At least this is not the big reason why many communities have given up the 6-3-3 plan.

The suggested change here in Washington seems to be based on economic reasons and a threatened huge crop of postwar babies. The dual system, when equalized in Washington, is going to be very costly. Already we have 15 high schools and in less than a decade if the segregated system still stands we will have to build at least three more colored high schools at a cost of more than 10 million dollars.

Because of the laws of Virginia and all Southern States, colored citizens are coming to our cities in hope of education, recreation, and a fairly decent chance for jobs and a living. The colored school population has steadily overtaken the white enrollment until today more than half of the elementary and junior high public school population is colored.

On the other hand the tremendous expansion of modern apartments and homes in nearby Virginia and Maryland attract thousands of our young white married people with children.

One solution to the school problem indicated by Mr. Sharpe would be the elimination of segregation. It is my opinion that the children and our society could adjust to such an edict. Because colored residential areas are concentrated in certain sections of the city, there would be but few white pupils attending neighborhood schools which are presently colored, and few colored children in schools now for white children.

Because of the eventuality of such social advancement it seems to me that educational statesmen should not wait until some court hands down a decision abolishing segregation as was done in interstate bus travel, but instead should be planning "inter-group" education here and now.

Makeshift Theater

I had followed with interest but comparatively little fervor the battle for the theater in the District until I saw the ballet the other night. The troupe's performance was excellent, but the production angle reminded me of a cross between a silent serial and the old-time school play. Will the ballerina make her leap or will she break her leg on the death-defying floor? (Little Eva crossing the ice was never like this). Will the audience see the stage hand crouching behind the curtain—in fact will the audience see the ballet in front of it? I imagine Lloyds of London wouldn't even insure them on that platform.

Washington is the capital of the leading nation in the world, and it should have a theater worthy of its position. After all, we are living in the twentieth century and surely it is not too much to ask for modern staging facilities in a theater. No one minds being a good sport about inconveniences, if there is a valid reason for them, but in this case there is not any excuse for such a makeshift theater.

Prison Chaplains

District Budget Officer Walter Fowler is not only a member but actually the chairman of the board of trustees of a Washington Methodist church, to say nothing of holding the presidency of the Methodist Union, yet he can deny with ease chaplain service for local prisons. That is, deny it unless it's done on a voluntary basis or paid for by somebody else.

The fact that Federal Chaplain Service is paid for from public funds certainly sets a precedent—Mr. Fowler would have run no risk of losing his job had he recommended the same policy for the District.

Air Hogging

In re the recent publicity over the air traffic difficulties in the vicinity of the Washington National Airport, I think it is apparent to the readers of your newspaper that the main trouble source is infractions by military aircraft. Notwithstanding the wisdom that may lie in segregating civilian and military air traffic as far as possible, I believe there is one aspect of this problem that has received little or no public mention. I refer to "hogging" of the air by civilian airline pilots and their infractions of flying regulations.

As a military pilot, I fly regularly in this area and have had many opportunities to observe the flying habits of the airlines. I have seen many occasions whereupon the latter have blantantly disobeyed air traffic control rules.

For example, assigned altitudes during instrument or marginal weather conditions have, on many occasions, not been maintained. Also, the traffic pattern for Washington National Airport, exclusive of the final approach, should be flown at an altitude of 1500 feet. This rule is broken by airline pilots many times each day.

More important, I have yet to see an airline pilot take the initiative in avoiding an air collision. In any tight situation they simply continue on course and expect the other fellow to get out of the way whereas in many cases it is they who are in the wrong. The rule specifies that in any potential collision situation the pilots of each of the two aircraft in question should execute a right turn and pass each other at a minimum distance of 500 feet. I have seen airline pilots ignore this rule repeatedly.

While the liability for many a collision and near-collision must be assumed by military pilots, it is manifestly unfair for them to be charged with all the blame. In my opinion, much of the present difficulty could be averted if the airline pilots would adhere more closely to flying rules and accept the philosophy that the air should be shared and not dominated.

High School Capacity

I earnestly hope that the interested community will secure a copy of Dr. Corning's statement before the Board of Education recently and read it very carefully.

Dr. Corning said that as early as 1929 consideration was given to the need for an additional high school for divisions 10-13. How many high schools have been built for divisions 1-9 in this 20-year period?

Dr. Corning said that the board, beginning in 1935, has made repeated efforts to secure appropriations for one high school for divisions 10-13. Why did it take six years for the board to begin to act?

If Central High School were transferred to divisions 10-13, the Cardozo building would be abandoned—as Dr. Strayer recommended; and, therefore, Dr. Corning's table that computes the possible capacity of high schools in divisions 10-13 is in error because it included Cardozo and Central. The elimination of Cardozo drops the net surplus from 1396 to 356.

Dr. Corning began by observing that crises arose from failure to provide public facilities as rapidly as the growth in population requires.

Is not a generous surplus net capacity, therefore, very desirable? Has not the lack of it hastened the crises now occurring so frequently in divisions 10-13? V. J. DOZIER.

U. S. Failures In Germany

By Marquis Childs

Hope In Integration

FRANKFURT, Germany.—In the bare, brown fields men and women are out working together, digging the root vegetables that will provide fodder for cattle and for humans in the winter months. The oxen or the milk cows—rarely horses pulling the carts—plod slowly along.

The patient labor of these farm families has scarcely changed in a thousand years. Their deliberate movements seem as old as man himself.

That is one of the strengths of this paradoxical nation—the solid base of a peasant economy underlying a high technology and a powerful industrial complex. Certainly, it is one of the reasons Germany has recovered with such amazing rapidity.

You leave Germany after a brief visit with the most mixed reactions. Democratization, decartelization, denazification—the big and ambitious words hardly seem to fit the present stage of occupation. The Allied position here is, indeed, not so much an occupation as a redoubt, a garrison set down in the midst of a warlike people who are growing more resentful and sullen as their deep-rooted chauvinism rises once again.

IN THE face of this attitude, not only Americans but Germans who had hoped for a truly democratic Germany are inclined to take a hopeless view. In their pessimism they frequently add that this is America's failure in the first major test of American responsibility.

While any conclusions based on such brief observation may have little worth, I shall nevertheless venture to say that this view seems to me too gloomy. If Germany can be integrated into the family of western European nations, then there is still hope that the rising tide of nationalism can be stemmed. Granted this is a big if. Integration would necessarily mean, for example, that a western German police or para-military force would become part of a western European force.

But above all, if there is still time to learn, and if we are capable of learning, then there are lessons of the utmost importance to be had from the American experience in occupying Germany. One of the most knowledgeable and perceptive Americans, who has been here through most of the occupation, expressed what seemed to me the truest insight into the effort that has been made here by the United States—at a cost that is roughly computed at $2,300,000,000 since 1945, exclusive of present ECA expenditures.

It should be said, first, that America has not really failed a test because we never came to grips with the challenge. That challenge lay in the relationship to the German people in their defeat.

The presumption was that they could be started off in a new direction, on the road to genuine democracy. But that also presumed a force of Americans eager and capable—with stress on capable—of leading Germany down that path. Here is the way it was expressed by the perceptive American who has seen the occupation in its various phases:

"WE TENDED at the outset to see it all in black and white. Or most Americans saw it that way.

"All Germans were bad because they were Germans. We failed to understand that there were many who had in spite of everything continued to believe in what we believe in. Failing to enlist their help, we put ourselves under an almost impossible handicap.

"Now once again it is all black and white. But this time the values are reversed. Any German who says he is against Russia must be a good German and on our side."

There is, I am afraid, a great deal of truth in that analysis, oversimplified though it is. What it means is that too few Americans in the occupation have shown the kind of political understanding essential to cope with Germany in defeat.

Some Americans have brought exceptional equipment to the task. James L. Riddleberger, for example, head of the State Department mission and chief political adviser to American High Commissioner John J. McCloy, has a broad knowledge of Germany, the people and their grim history. But too often these men have had to spread themselves too thin and their recommendations have been short-circuited or ignored.

Some have gone home in disgust and dismay after having struggled long and in vain to try to help the German people on the democratic path. They have been largely responsible for spreading the conviction that all is lost.

But to pull back from the German responsibility at this stage is to risk defeat not alone here but in all of western Europe. For no matter what anyone may think of what has happened in the last four years, whether well or ill, the German people are inextricably a part of this continent.

Arizona Parkway

My attention has just been called to the impending plans for construction of Arizona Parkway for through automobile traffic to extend through Glover-Archibold Park. It would seem to me desirable to postpone this development until the effects of possible additional traffic at Washington Circle have been worked out. It seems a pity to spoil a tract intended as a recreational and nature park, unless there is no other possible solution.

Bolivian Couldn't See Airliner on Which 55 Died, CAB Pilot Says

land, but had to land in Toledo, Ohio, because of trouble in the same right engine.

The ALPA walked out after a CAB official said that testimony in the hearing would necessarily be confined to the November 1 crash. Chairman Robert W. Chrisp asked just before the indefinite recess if the ALPA had any statement to make for the record, but ALPA representatives had left.

The airline pilots renewed their call for an independent air safety board in a statement issued last night.

Methods used in the CAB inquiry were "the best possible argument for reestablishment of the board," Behncke said.

"The most vital of the three original parts of the Civil Aeronautics Acts," which the ALPA said is the independent board, "is to all intents and purposes dead," the statement said.

"Fallacy" Stressed

The board's hearings pointed up the "fallacy" of having safety matters investigated by the agencies charged with making and enforcing regulations, the ALPA charged.

"We say with fearleess directness that the methods and procedures employed at this investigation by the CAB, the investigating agency, are completely and basically wrong," the pilots' union declared.

"No Federal agency . . . can be expected to investigate and blame itself" when an accident occurs under the rules it makes and enforces, the statement added.

Harold A. Jones, CAB member and participant in the investigation, promised at the close of yesterday's session that the inquiry would continue outside the public hearing room.

"This is no time for name calling," he said, as if he may have anticipated the ALPA outburst. "It is time for all of us to work together constructively."

Flight Reenacted

CAB Pilot Garrett described a flight he took last Wednesday in a P-38, attempting to follow the path believed to have been flown by Briboux.

At the point where it is thought Bridoux made a slight bank to the right to line up with the runway, "I could judge it would be impossible to see an airplane on its base leg or on final approach to the left," Garrett said.

This point was about 2 miles to the south of National Airport, the pilot added.

It has been testified that the DC-4 was making its approach to land as the P-38 was making a slight turn from above and behind, apparently toward the same runway.

Garrett said it is necessary to "roll the aircraft 10 to 15 degrees" to observe properly on right and left.

In his flight, the CAB chief pilot said, he discovered one thing he throught "quite pertinent."

"At any time that I operated the power controls—throttles, propellor or fuel mixture—upon returning my arm to a natural position," he said, his elbow "repeatedly turned the volume control off on the very high frequency receiver."

Garrett further testified that from a point over the Masonic Temple in Alexandria, he "had to watch Runway 3 closely in order not to pass it to the left in making a turn into the runway."

He said his altitude was about 1600 feet over the temple,, which is south of Alexandria, about 2¾ millies from the south end of the runway. He turned on a movie camera in his P-38 then, to show "at which point I would not have been able to see an aircraft below me and to the left."

Tells of Final Approach

Bridoux has testified he did not remember any particular landmark in his flight around Alexandria. He said he did not think he was south of that city during his flight, which consisted of at least two 360-degree turns over the airport at 3500 feet before dropping down to about 1500 feet.

He began his final approach straight into the runway at about 1500 feet, Bridoux testified. But he did not remember being over any city.

Bridoux estimated his rate of descent to be about 500 feet per minute the "first time" he circled the field. He lowered his landing gear about half a mile south of the runway on a course to the south before turning into his final approach, he testified.

The point at which he began his final approach was not specified in Bridoux's statement. Witnesses have testified he was seen approaching from the vicinity of the Masonic Temple.

Eastern Official Asks Law

John Halliburton, assistant operations manager of Eastern Air Lines, charged that it is "the direct responsbility" of Government aviation agencies "or of Congress" to cut down mid-air collisions.

He urged that they enforce "some regulation or whatever else is required to stop this needless waste of life."

The November 1 crash was the third mid-air collision involving Eastern planes and sent the death toll to 74, Halliburton said.

He said Eastern has been the "chief sufferer," and recalled 24 instance when "aircraft had been maneuvered contrary to civil air regulations to endanger Eastern Air Lines craft" since July 30, when a Navy fighter rammed an airliner at Fort Dix, N. J., killing 16 persons.

He directed another sharp remark at the Government when he said "control of these flights has been taken completely out of our hands by circumstances beyond our control."

Kenneth C. Sonner, air safety maintenance specialist with the CAB, testified that the last authorized flight of the P-38 Bridoux was testing was for a ferry flight from Seymour, Ind., to Washington on October 11.

The permit was for a five-day period only and expired October 16, Sonner said.

He added that the DC-4 was airworthy, but that he had been unable to determine the condition of the P-38 at the time of the crash because complete maintenance records were not available.

Robert E. Bell, aviation safety agent for the CAA, told the panel that Bridoux was refused an American transport pilot's license because he failed to make the passing grade of 70 on a written examination.

Bridoux scored 47 in radio communication, 57 in civil air regulations, 53 in navigation, and 63 in meteorology.

Did Well on Oral Test

The "limited license," Bell added, was the type issued to foreign airmen almost without question if they hold a foreign pilot's license.

A CAA examiner gave Bridoux an oral test, on which the flier made an "entirely satisfactory" showing, Bell added.

He also testified that Bridoux made two unauthorized flights October 24 in a Howard (former Navy single-engine) plane he had purchased.

The flights were between National Airport and Beacon Field, near Alexandria, Bell said. One of them was made after a CAA examiner found the plane was improperly registered and told Bridoux to correct the situation.

Right Engine Failed

Introduced into the record was a written statement from Hasson Calloway, an Eastern Air Lines pilot of Atlanta, Ga., confirming reports that he had once flown the P-38 in the 1946 Bendix Trophy cross-country race.

The right engine failed near Toledo, Calloway said, so he landed and checked it over without finding the trouble. He refueled and proceeded on to Cleveland.

Other witnesses who appeared at the final day's hearing included:

John W. Ryan, Andrews Air Force Base civilian mechanic, who installed a radio in the P-38 after one burned out on a ground test several days before the crash.

Willard T. Breckenridge, also an Andrews mechanic, who made repairs to the plane October 25.

Statement Amended

B. H. Griffin, director of National Airport, who said he wanted to amend an earlier statement that Bridoux positively took off from the north-south runway at the field. He returned to his vantage point and checked again to find it was difficult to tell whether it was No. 36 or No. 3, the northeast-southwest runway, Griffi said.

E. N. Fales, CAA flight test engineer, who had checked the visibility from the P-38 cockpit.

Glenn Tigner, tower operator at National Airport when the smash-up occurred, who modified his earlier statement that Bridoux had acknowledged Tigner's radioed landing instructions. Tigner said he "assumed" he heard an acknowledgment because he turned his attention to another plane, which he would not have done otherwise.

Sidney Berman, chief of the aircraft structure team in the investigation, who testified the P-38 "quite definitely" cut into the DC-4 with its left engine on the left side, above the upper frame of the emergency exit just at the trailing edge of the wing.

Syracuse U. Bid To Kidnap Colgate Band Is Foiled

Syracuse, N. Y., Nov. 14 (AP).—Plans of some Syracuse University students to kidnap the Colgate University band ended in a demonstration at the New York Central railroad station today.

Some 15 policemen were needed to stop the free-for-all fight among about 100 Syracuse students and the 60 musicians from the rival college.

One unidentified Colgate student suffered an ankle injury. A Syracuse policeman, Sgt. Dennis Flynn, got a wrenched shoulder as he tried to stop the fists, baseball bats and band instruments from flying.

The kidnap attempt was planned when Syracusans learned the Red Raider band would pass through here on the way home from Saturday's Colgate-Northwestern game at Chicago. They decided to shave the musicians heads as a prank in connection with next Saturday's Colgate-Syracuse game.

To convey unsuspecting band members to the Syracuse campus, Orange boosters hired buses. They hoped the Colgaters would think the buses were official transportation to their Hamilton campus. But the ruse failed and the melee ensued.

Judge Asks Couple To Bury Hatchet

Robert Boal Wickes, 47, and Mrs. H. Arleene Wickes, his estranged 25-year-old wife, were urged by a District Court judge yesterday to become reconciled rather than battle it out in court.

All the attorneys in the case then agreed to do "everything humanly possible" to get Wickes and Mrs. Wickes to make up.

Mrs. Wickes, a blonde stenographer from Providence, R. I., wants $2000 a month in alimony and custody of their 2-year-old daughter Judy.

The child is now in Argentina, where the Wickeses resided on a lavish scale, according to Mrs. Wickes' testimony. For his part, Wickes, a lawyer of Mt. Vernon, Va., flatly denied the statement of his wife's attorneys that he has more than $700,000 in banks. He asserts he is without funds.

Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut dismissed the writ filed to prevent Wickes from leaving the city, but said trial would be set in "the immediate future" for the custody case.

He then decided to take what he called the "practical view." He asked both husband and wife their notions of the future. Both wanted the child, and both expressed a disinclination to patch things up.

Mrs. Wickes almost broke down when she said her baby probably would no longer recognize her. Wickes said he was under a strain, and couldn't think the situation out clearly.

The judge then said:

"I probably am wrong, but I have a feeling that if these people could forget this litigation they would get together. Maybe he could persuade Mrs. Wickes to go back to the Argentine with him. It would be a very happy Christmas present for all of them.

"I don't mean that they should do it right now. They are too mad with each other, whoever is right, to do any good now. But this litigation isn't going to do either of them any good, and most certainly it won't help the baby."

When Mrs. Wickes' attorney wondered why Wickes didn't want to bring Judy here and let the court decide her future, Judge Schweinhaut replied:

"Maybe I'm the reason. Here I am sitting here, not talking like a judge at all. That's one reason."

Wickes had accused his wife of flying back to the United States despite his protests. She accused him of beating her.

They met in the hall after the judge's lecture. Mrs. Wickes talked to him about a candelabra for a moment and he answered her with a few words.

There were no smiles, nor could a kind glance be perceived.

Brannan said they discussed mostly "the ordinary housekeeping business of Government."

It was learned the three reviewed, among other things, agency differences between the Agriculture Department and FSA in administration of food and drug controls.

Girl in Fraternity Slaying . . .

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

HELD AS WITNESS—Miss Joyce Crafton, 22, of Cleveland, shows strain of her ordeal as she is arraigned yesterday in Columbus, Ohio, police station as a material witness in the slaying of Jack T. McKeown, Ohio State University senior. Police say McKeown was shot by James D. Heer, a fraternity brother of McKeown. Miss Crafton, not a university student, was Heer's date the night of the shooting

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 14 (AP).—Attractive Joyce Crafton, 22, today admitted James D. Heer was "a little amorous in saying goodnight" just before he killed his fraternity brother, but she denied he made improper advances.

The Cleveland girl attended a court hearing during which Heer pleaded not guilty to charges of first-degree murder and afterward told reporters that a detective's story of improper advances was not true.

Detective Sergt. Lowell V. Sheets said anger over Miss Crafton's rejection of his advances may have spurred the "trigger-happy" Heer to return to the Delta Tau Delta fraternity house and shoot down popular Jack T. McKeown, 21, managing editor of the Ohio State Lantern, campus daily.

Miss Crafton was Heer's date at a gala homecoming party that preceded the sensational campus killing early Saturday. She was staying at the home of Heer's aunt and uncle.

The university board of trustees today banned keeping of firearms in university housing facilities, including fraternity and sorority houses. There was no previous rule prohibiting firearms.

Sheets said at the hearing that Heer admitted during questioning that he was "going to shoot someone" as he headed back to the fraternity house after saying goodnight to his date.

"There were no improper advances," Miss Crafton told newsmen. "He was a little amorous in saying goodnight, but that was all. He just took me to my door and said goodnight."

McKeown was shot down minutes after Heer got back to the Delta Tau Delta house. Sheets quoted Heer as saying he was "mad at a group of six or eight fraternity brothers who had criticized him for dancing with other girls."

Heer's mother sat weeping in the courtroom as the youth pleaded not guilty.

Sheets said Heer argued with Miss Crafton as they were being driven home by another fraternity brother, John W. Johnson, 20. Johnson censured Heer for his conduct and threatened not to drive him back to the fraternity house unless he took the girl to her door, the detective said.

"Heer then took the girl to the house and went with her to her room," Sheets said. "There he attempted to make improper advances, but Miss Crafton resisted.

"Heer stomped from the room stating that Miss Crafton would read plenty about him in the newspapers," Sheets said.

Killed In-Law In Defense, Trucker Says

A 200-pound truck driver testified yesterday that he fatally beat his 73-year-old, 125-pound father-in-law in self-defense.

Wilkins

The driver, Herbert F. Wilkins, 34, of 1028 4th st. ne., is charged with second-degree murder. The case goes to a District Court jury today.

Wilkins said William Benezette, his father-in-law, threatened him with an iron pipe.

The stocky defendant, who has only one hand, said that in fear and anger, he struck Benzette with his fist. Physicians testified Benezette died of a brain hemorrhage caused by blows of a blunt instrument.

The fatal argument ensued, witnesses said, after Wilkins accused his wife, Mrs. Mary A. Wilkins, 23, of going with another man. Wilkins went out to drink and "talk things over" with the man, and later returned home.

There in an upstairs room, Assistant United States Attorney John C. Conliff, jr., charges, Wilkins began beating the wife. When Benezette called up from the foot of the stairs, Conliff said, Wilkins went down and the fight began.

Judge Edward A. Tamm will charge the jury before it begins its deliberations.

Father Stabbed, Son Arrested

Howard N. Shorter, 22, of 1121 3d st. sw., was held yesterday in $10,000 bond for grand jury action on a charge of stabbing his 61-year-old father.

The victim, James E. Shorter, of the same address, is reported in critical condition from the wound.

Judge George D. Neilson of Municipal Court ordered the son held.

Police reported that November 3, after breakfast, the elder Shorter lay down to take a nap and was then cut with a butcher knife.

Meet Charlie Tobin — Another "Do-it-yourself" American

He created his own business!

Charles E. Tobin, Jr., Dallas, Texas, knows that nothing need stop a man's carving out a career on his own! He put himself through college; and later, after Navy service, through law school. Then he founded a land-clearing company. It was tough going at first—meeting payrolls and felling timber along a 175-mile right-of-way for a power company. But today, equipped with the manpower and the machines he needs, he's ready to take on jobs for farmers, contractors, highway departments. At 30, Charlie has put his Right-of-Way Clearing Company in the black. It's filling a need in his community. And he built it on his own!

☆ It's the American Spirit!

YOU'LL find plenty of folks who feel as Charlie Tobin does . . . on every Main Street! They're the ones with imagination, initiative, and drive. They're opening "new frontiers" of opportunity, not only for themselves—but for others. They're making their own security, too. For themselves and their families.

One evidence of this modern American "Do-it-yourself spirit" is this: 4 out of 5 families are voluntarily safeguarding their independence through life insurance. And new thousands are turning to it every day.

To fill these growing needs of men and women in every walk of life, the life insurance business itself must grow. To some it must bring the satisfaction of knowing last expenses will be paid. To others, security for widows, education for children, or worry-free retirement.

To do so much for so many, 584 individual life insurance companies are actively competitive. Representing them at a personal level are 150,000 trained agents who devote their lives to helping American families help themselves!

It's a Fact...

It's a fact that the first consideration in making life insurance company investments is safety.

- State Insurance laws specify the kind of investments the 584 competing companies may make.
- These laws are made in the interest of the policyholders.
- The companies themselves make doubly sure that their investments are safe, and that "all the eggs aren't in the same basket."
- As a result, the greatest part of life insurance assets is invested in the form of bonds and mortgages.

To make sure you are getting the greatest benefit from your own life insurance, see your agent. Life insurance is a service! Your agent is trained to help you make the most of it. The Institute of Life Insurance—central source of information—60 East 42nd Street, New York 17, N. Y.

Football Coaches Plan to Kick Out Platoon System

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Tuesday Morning Q. B.

IF THAT WASN'T football's daffiest weekend, the last one, it will suffice for recent memory. The much maligned pigskin, with its penchant for taking funny bounces, never provoked such queer sequences as were rampant on both college and pro gridirons.

POVICH

The football crowds the Nation over were flabbergasted for at least 30 minutes when Yankee Stadium flashed the report that North Carolina had Notre Dame in a 6-6 tie at the end of the first half, even without Charley Justice. Eventually that contest resolved itself into another romp for the Irish, but not until after the Tar Heels threatened to take a two-touchdown lead.

The pros came up with some strange tactics. The Eagles ran up 44 points and an easy win over the Redskins without once being forced to punt. And up in Pittsburgh the Steelers fought to a 7-7 tie with the League-leading Los Angeles Rams without once attempting a pass.

In the All-America Conference, Ray Flaherty's Chicago Hornets held the New York Yankees scoreless in the last 52 minutes, yet took a 14-10 beating. At Griffith Stadium, on two consecutive plays, the Redskins had only 10 men on the field, and in one series of downs had both Sammy Baugh and Harry Gilmer in the same backfield.

THE STRANGEST, and loudest note, though, was sounded up in Boston by B. U. Coach Buff Donelli, who screamed that his team was robbed by the officials in its 14-13 defeat by Maryland. This, from a coach whose team had virtually been given one gift touchdown and otherwise would have been beaten worse by the Terrapins.

The biggest break of the ball game went Donelli's way when the officials ruled defensive holding against Maryland on a completed B. U. pass play that ended on the Maryland 15-yard line. But it ended there only temporarily. The referee gave B. U. the ball for a first down on the Maryland 4, after stepping off 5 yards from the spot of the foul.

Donelli's squawk was unseemly, anyway. He brought sectionalism into it by claiming that the two officials of Southern nativity favored Maryland, the Southern team, and his big beef was that they refused to give B. U. a first down on the Maryland 4 in the third quarter. Donelli said B. U. Back Kent made the distance. But it was plain that Maryland tackle Chet Gierula had stopped him for no gain.

JIM TATUM, the Maryland coach, has very generously said that his team was lucky to win the game. Naturally he's grateful for that blocked Boston conversion that gave Maryland its wafer-thing one-point margin, but otherwise there wasn't much sheer luck about the Terrapin's triumph. Donelli, if he came clean, might admit that the Terrapins rather deserve to win.

You aren't exactly a lucky team when you march 77 yards to one touchdown, as Maryland did, and then come from behind in the final period to go 81 yards for the winning touchdown. Not a single penalty against B. U. was attendant on those two marches. They rammed that ball down the throats of Donelli's lads, and the Maryland kids will never believe they were a lucky team that day.

What might have been a long and interesting relationship between Maryland and B. U. now seems kaput. There is no game scheduled for next season, and Tatum hints there won't be another. The greater damage is that to B. U. which already has a tough time scheduling top clubs. Maryland encounters no such hostility, and was the best attraction on the B. U. schedule.

FOR REDSKIN FANS there was a modicum of balm despite the one-sided defeat by the Eagles. There were sequences in which the Redskin line actually outplayed the Eagles during the game, and in their debut under new Coach Herman Ball the Redskins were a far more interesting team than they'd been under Welchel.

For the first time in years, Redskin fans saw a semblance of a running attack even if it didn't click for touchdowns. There were pitch-outs and reverses and wide hand-offs that were a welcome departure from the old Redskin strategy of two in inside plays, a third-down pass, and a fourth-down punt.

The fact that the Redskins were on the same field with the Eagles didn't necessarily mean that they belonged there, but off their performance Sunday they don't have as far to go as formerly. On Sunday, the 'Skins might have beaten any other club in the league except the Eagles. In the midst of speculation over who may be head coach of the Redskins next year, the thought suggests itself—hold that Ball.

Harman Says It's Unfair, 'We'll Vote It Off of Books'

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—Nationwide resentment against unlimited substitution in college football will doom the "two-platoon system" after this season, Coach Harvey Harman of Rutgers said today.

"Ninety percent of the coaches in the country are opposed to it," Harman declared. "We are going to vote it out of the books."

The Rutgers coach said a strong campaign against platoon football has been launched by a group of mentors "who feel unrestricted substitution is ruining the sport by making the rich richer and the poor poorer.

'Only a few are for it, fellows like Earl Blaik at Army and Lefty James at Cornell," he added. "But there couldn't be more than 10 percent."

Little Defends It

Other coaches — Rip Engle of Brown, Ed Danowski of Fordham and Jim Tatum of Maryland—raised voices against the platoon system at the weekly meeting of the New York Football Writers.

They had the same objection, it is hurting the smaller teams without the wealth of manpower and coaching personnel to make it work.

Lou Little of Columbia, chairman of the football coaches' rules committee, was one of the defenders.

Unlimited substitution permits teams to send in 11-man specialized units almost at will. The liberal rule has permitted big, well-stocked clubs like Army, Michigan and Cornell to employ special offensive and defensive elevens, tossed in and out en masse.

"Ruination of Football"

"It will be the ruination of football," complained Harman. "It is denying the head coach the pleasure of coming in personal contact with all his boys since the offensive and defensive units have separate teaching staffs. It is doing away with the all-around player."

Tatum said the present rule heavily favored the king-sized squad while further handicapping the handicapped.

Columbia's scholarly Little asked that the matter be examined more carefully before a hasty change-back is made.

"I personally like the rule," he said. "I think we should favor anything that will bring us a better brand of football and this trend toward specialization does it.

Little Tells 'Em

"You can't equalize the playing strength of teams by legislation. If you fellows can't meet the increased competition I suggest perhaps you should mend your football fences or drop back to the weaker class."

Little said he would send questionnaires to all coaches next week asking for rules proposals. When these are in, they will be studied and recommendation will be made to the college rules making body which meets in New York in January.

"We will give the suggestions every consideration," he said.

Memory Pays Off

Maryland's Tatum Area Coach of Week

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

COACH BUFF DONELLI, of Boston University, doesn't know it, but a remark he made to Jim Tatum in 1942 helped bring about the first defeat of B. U. Saturday and make Tatum The Washington Post's area coach of the week.

JIM TATUM

At the time, Donelli was coaching at Duquesne and the Dukes had won 16 in a row when they invaded Chapel Hill, N. C., to play Tatum's war-time North Carolina Tar Heels.

The Tar Heels won, 13-6. After the game Donelli, whose teams are regarded as the most artful ballhandlers and deceivers in football, told Tatum:

"Jim, that was a clever job of coaching you did today, telling your team to watch the referee so they would be able to follow the ball better."

For one of the few times in his life, Tatum was altogether modest. "Buff," he replied, "You're giving me credit for being much smarter than I am. I never told my boys that, but I wish I had."

All last week Tatum warned his Terrapins that the B. U. Terriers were magicians with a football. "The referee is behind them and he has to follow the ball carrier. If you're not sure who has the ball, take a quick glance at the referee. He'll be following the ball carrier."

FORTUNATELY, the Maryland linemen were capable of solving most of B. U.'s tricks by their own devices, but the Donelli incident is used to point out the thoroughness of the Terps preparations.

Tatum even practiced them uphill for a few days because the Fenway Park gridiron in Boston slants up at one end of the field.

He also came up with a surprise for the Bostonians. Until Saturday, Fullback Earl Roth was used almost exclusively as a punter. That's all the Boston scouts saw of him. Saturday, however, their intelligence department was shocked and so was their football team as Roth emerged as a power runner. He and Mighty Mo Modzelewski rushed the Terps 81 yards downfield to set up the winning touchdown.

All along Tatum had confided to intimates that "we've got a pretty fair football team out here." Last Saturday night he was shouting it to the world.

Today for his victory he takes a bow as "The Coach of the Week."

GW, Hoyas Renew Feud On Saturday

As far as the students of the two schools are concerned, Georgetown and George Washington open and close their football seasons at Griffith Stadium Saturday.

Saturday's intra-city fracas winds up the 1949 card for both teams and the winner will definitely and enthusiastically mark the season as a whopping success.

On the basis of their 5-3 record, the Hoyas will probably go into the scrap favorites over a Colonial squad which has won only three of its eight games. But on the basis of their games with Maryland, the two teams should play to a standstill.

The Terps beat 'em both by 26 points—Georgetown by 33 to 7 and George Washington by 40-14. Records count for nothing when the GW's play the GU's, however.

Take the last two years, for instance. Georgetown was the favorite both times. In 1947 they were held to a 0-0 tie and last year the Colonials registered a 13-7 victory.

Regardless of past performances, Saturday's Stadium brush shapes up as a lulu of a battle.

There's Andy Davis to run and pass for the Colonials and there's also Al DuGoff to carry the mail for the G-streeters, Passer Frank Mattingly and runner Billy Conn will furnish most of the excitement for the Georgetowners.

Kessing Suggests Peace Between Pro Footballers

Another in a long string of suggestions for a working agreement between the All-America Conference and the National Football League was made yesterday by O. O. (Scrappy) Kessing, comissioner of the A-A C, at the weekly luncheon of the Touchdown Club.

Kessing said that joint draft of college players would enable the two leagues to distribute talent more evenly and that a world series of pro fotball would be well received by fans.

"I am speaking in the interest of pro football generally, and with no selfish aim," Kessing said. He later denied that there was any chance of Cleveland and San Francisco bouting his loop for the NFL.

Last Pick-the-Winner Contest

Virginia-Tulane Big Game of Week

THIS IS THE last week of The Washington Post's Pick-the-Winners football contest.

One of the biggest games in the Nation will be Virginia vs. Tulane at Charlottesville Saturday. Select the score of that game and you may be this week's winner.

Each week the winner of the contest will receive two tickets to the Army-Navy game in Philadelphia, November 26, and an all-expenses-paid trip to this game for two persons.

The person submitting the most accurate entry each week also will receive four tickets to a major college or professional game in this area. The Washington Post will select this game.

The contest each week will include 21 major college games. Each contestant will select the winner (or tie) of 20 of these games. On the twenty-first game, each contest will give the "Probable Score."

Ratterman To Quit AAC, Collins Says

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—Owner Ted Collins of the New York Bulldogs in the National Football League said today Quarterback George Ratterman of the Buffalo Bills would play for his club next year. Buffalo is a member of the rival All-America Conference.

Collins would not tell how he would acquire Ratterman, former Notre Dame player now regarded as one of the outstanding passers in the 4-year-old loop. Buffalo tied

He added that peace between the National League and the All-America Conference "is further apart than ever because the NFL is having too prosperous a season."

Cleveland, 7 to 7, yesterday on Ratterman's guidance.

Asked if Charles Ewart would coach the Bulldogs again next year, Collins replied that "You can't keep your coach when your team can't win games."

The Bulldogs lost to the Chicago Cardinals yesterday, 65 to 20, before 9072 fans.

Ratterman's only comment was: "I am surprised at the story given out by Mr. Collins. I cannot confirm or deny it at this point."

He said he telephoned Collins this afternoon, but would not disclose what was said.

James F. Breuil, owner of the Bills, exploded with the terse statement:

"Ratterman is my quarterback!"

Jim Wells, assistant to Breuil, declared:

"I don't have anything to say for the moment. I hope to clear it tomorrow."

It was known, however, that Ratterman and Wells conferred during the afternoon at the Bills' office.

Mims Beats Art Bethea

Holly Mims pounded out a unanimous decision over Artie Bethea last night in the feature eight-rounder at Turner's Arena. Mims had Bethea down three times, twice in the fourth and again in the sixth.

Mims weighed 157 and Bethea 154½ for the all-local scrap.

Mims hurt his right hand on a hard smash to Bethea's head in the fifth and favored it for the remainder of the fight.

Marshall Clayton, 141, locally managed New Orleans fighter, stopped Bobby Rosado, 145, former Puerto Rican lightweight champ, after 2:21 of the seventh in the second eight rounder. Clayton was on top of Rosado all the way and had him propped up against the ropes pounding rights and lefts to the head without return when Referee Harry Volkman awarded him the TKO.

Clayton, former all-Army champ who hasn't lost a pro fight, worked over Rosado, breaking two of the Puerto Rican's ribs with his hard punching.

In the first eight rounder, Little Dynamite, 129, Washington, gained the decision over Pat O'Leary, 131, Chicago.

The fourth eight-rounder on the card was canceled because of a boil under Frank Lacey's right eye. Lacey was scheduled to fight Garland Edwards.

Jimmy Briscoe, 145, pounded out a unanimous decision over Charlie Duke, 148, in an all local four-round preliminary and Johnny Holt, 160, Washington won the decision over Ike Martin, 160, Baltimore in a five rounder.

A slim crowd of 569 paid a gross $1038.60 and a net, $769.60 to see the show.

Louis Has Easy Time With Johnny Shkor

Boston, Nov. 14 (AP).—Retired Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis dropped Johnny Shkor of Boston for three nine-counts in a 10-round no-decision boxing exhibition tonight before 8471 at the Boston Garden.

The 35-year-old Louis, weighing 229¾ pounds, had the 220-pound Shkor, six years the junior, down once in the second round and twice in the third.

Caps, Chicago Play in New York

New York, Nov. 14.—The Washington Caps, currently in second place in the Eastern division of the National Basketball Association, meet the Chicago Stags at Madison Square Garden tonight in the first game of a doubleheader.

The Eastern division leading Syracuse Nationals take on the New York Knickerbockers in the second game.

Steelers Drop Joe Glamp and Vince Ragunas

Pittsburgh, Nov. 14 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Steelers tonight released halfback Joe Glamp, kicking specialist, and Rookie Quarterback Vince Ragunas.

Glamp, who was putting in his third season for the Steelers, kicked 18 points after touchdown this season and made good on one of five field goal attempts. He carried the ball only three times. He is a resident of Mt. Pleasant, Pa.

Ragunas, a graduate of Virginia Military Institute, played in two games for the Steelers.

The club also announced its second and third draft choices which were made at a national league draft meeting in Philadelphia a week ago.

The second choice was tackle Louis Allen of Duke University. Third choice is Jack Halliday, six-foot-three guard at Southern Methodist. The Steelers did not disclose their first choice.

Wilson High Parents Get Behind Championship Game

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

WOODROW WILSON High School's parents are ready to set an example for the rest of the city by guaranteeing 100 percent attendance at the Interhigh football champion game November 25 at Griffith Stadium.

The board of trustees of the Wilson Home and School Association are meeting today at 12:30 p. m. in the school cafeteria to arrange special seating at the game for 2500 parents.

"This is our way of helping to relieve the shortage of athletic equipment for our high school children," said L. Welch Pogue, president of the Wilson parents' group, yesterday.

"All of the game's proceeds will be used to buy equipment for the kids, and we're going to beat all other home and school associations in selling tickets," said Pogue.

"EVERYBODY IS pitching in to make the game a big success—not just fathers and mothers of football players, but the parents of every pupil."

Today's meeting is to arrange distribution of the tickets to all the parents.

Wilson has a big stake in the championship game. Its team has all but clinched the Southern Division title, and needs only to beat lowly Chamberlain Friday to gain a berth in the title contest.

Central and McKinley Tech, oldest rivals in the Interhigh League, battle it out for the Northern Division title Saturday at 2 p. m. in the Central Stadium. Each team is undefeated against Washington opposition.

Pancho Finds Beating Kramer Tough

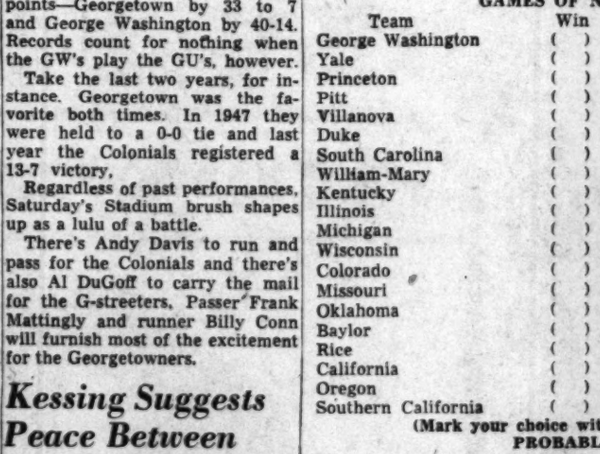
By Bus Ham
Post Sports Editor

TWO YOUNG MEN who make a living playing tennis made personal appearances around town yesterday. In this corner blond Jack Kramer, 165 pounds, 6 feet, 1 inch; over there, dark Pancho Gonzales, 185, 6 feet, 2 incnes.

Mr. Kramer and Mr. Gonzales currently are 1-2 in professional circles. They are on an exhibition tour that will keep them busy until January 13, with time out from December 21 to January 7 for a tour of Europe.

In the past 10 days, Kramer and Gonzales played nine matches. Yesterday they had a day off. They spent it seeing newspaper, radio and television guys, just to remind them that Kramer and Gonzales have a date at Uline Arena November 24.

Kramer was looking like a guy who has trained too fine. He's tired. Gonzales stretched his long brown body on a desk, read stories in the paper about his triumph in the national singles last September, and looked as if he had never been tired in his life.



PANCHO GONZALES (LEFT) AND JACK KRAMER

In Baltimore the other night, their third set went 19—17, Kramer winning.

"Pancho had match point four times but couldn't quite make it," Kramer smiled.

"I got so disgusted trying to make that point and beat this guy that I finally said to myself, 'what to hell, I'm going to play this one out for fun.'"

Right now their series stands at 11-3, Kramer. After the first seven matches, it was 4-3, Kramer. Jack has taken the last seven hand running.

"But they all are close," said Kramer.

Pancho was asked if he was about to get Jack's number, how Kramer was beating him, experience, accuracy or variety of strokes.

"Aw, I guess it's steadiness," Pancho drawled. "I try to cut a shot in too close and lose a point here and there. They add up and Jack noses me out. Maybe it's like a guy missing short putts when his opponent makes them."

That was all Pancho had to say about golf. He doesn't like to "look like a fool fanning that little ball."

But Kramer is a golf hound.

"I'll be back for the National Celebrities next May," he said. "I shot a 79 not long ago, first time I ever broke 80. I'll have Pancho playing golf when we get back to California so that he can get off the first tee in the Celebrities without whiffing it."

Longshots Laran, Manchac Race to Dead Heat at Pimlico

Bill Bennings . . .

DEAR FOLKS: AT PIMLICO

Thursday's Riggs' Handicap took on added interest with the arrival of Donor and Chains. By the way, that race means another clash of Pilaster and Blue Hills, the latter without Eddie Arcaro of course. Carlyle (formerly Racing Form) Johnson will join the official family at Charles Town. Bowie has lined up some of the best stake horses in the East for its feature races. The Maryland racing writers stage their annual dinner at the Hotel Emerson in Baltimore Wednesday night. An attempt will be made to give Havre de Grace and Pimlico 25 days next spring and Laurel and Bowie 25 days in the fall but Bowie, naturally, opposes. BILL.

King Midas Is 3d by Half Length

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Pimlico, Md., Nov. 14—Laran, along the inside rail, and Manchac on the far outside, drove into the finish line today and the photo sign was lighted setting off a jillion friendly and unfriendly bets as to which was the winner. The judges, after putting a magnifying glass on the print, called it a dead heat, satisfying almost all the customers.

Laran, in the colors of E. A. Nicodemus, paid $22.30 to win, $15.20 to place and $5.60 to show. The even-Stephen pair was clocked in 1.45 1-5 for the mile and a sixteenth. It was the day's feature, the Omar Khay Yama, contested over a slow track and before 10,000 fans.

Manchac Swings Out

Laran, ridden by James Lynch, was always well placed and came to the inside for the final drive. Manchac, with Bobbie Strange up, was last for a half mile and then swung to the outside.

Manchac, with 25-to-1 odds, appeared a "sure" winner inside the sixteenth pole, but he bore out slightly going into the wire while Laran "came again" on a straight course. Third and only a half length off the deadlock for the victory was Bobanet Stable's King Midas.

The disappointment was Brookmeade Stable's Dart By. Installed the favorite, the son of Whirlaway made several moves and then flattened out under Johnny Gilbert's handling.

Apprentice Dick Lawless, who started his saddle career at Charles Town last June, wasn't long making his presence felt. Just in from Lincoln Downs, where he rode 25 winners, the youngster brought Turban, a $51 shot, home in the seventh race. Turban raced for Louis Hurwitz of Washington.

Double Pays $618

Favorite players took another beating for the day, their troubles starting with the daily double of $618.20 that went to a few scattered backers of the 8-and-12 combination. King Ranch's Bird in Hand won the first at $15.40 while Mrs. B. F. Lister's Momo's Boy annexed the second at $50.60.

Another of the day's successful longshots was Flamingo Farm's Darling Man ridden by George Cardoza in the fourth race. The Washington-owned 2-year-old paid $51.60.

Williamson Drops Army to Fourth

In Cross-Country

Terps Win Conference Title Again

The Southern Conference cross-country run went true to form yesterday and Maryland pulled down its third straight title by a wide margin.

North Carolina State, as expected, furnished the most competition for Maryland, but when the finish positions of the 65 entrants were totaled up, the Terrapins had a 48-point margin. Their count was 32, State's 80.

North Carolina was a close third with 85, Davidson fourth with 92. William and Mary, Duke, VPI and Wake Forest trailed in that order.

Bob Palmer, Maryland's ace from Riverhead, N. Y., finished on top for the third straight time in the conference meet. He did the 4¼-mile tour in21:34.6. It goes up as a new conference record. The old one, which Palmer held, was for a 4-mile course.

It was Maryland's twenty-four straight win in cross country competition and Palmer finished first for the eighteenth straight time.

The summary:
1, Palmer, Maryland, 21:34.6; 2, Creamer, Maryland, 21:39; 3, Magill, North Carolina, 21:39; 4, Baker, William and Mary, 21:59; 5, Lindsay, William and Mary, 21:59; 6, Umbarger, Maryland, 22:24; 7, Hamrick, North Carolina, 22:33; 8, Bradley, Davidson, 22:41; 9, T. Greene Stays As NBA Head

Miami Beach, Fla., Nov. 14 (AP).—An open revolt against Commissioner Abe J. Greene of the National Boxing Association faded today and Greene was given a unanimous vote of confidence.

Spearheaded by the Illinois and Colorado delegations, Greene was accused of "grabbing too much publicity" and conducting NBA business without the consent of other organization officers.

Joseph A. Triner of the Illinois commission at one point told Greene:

"You're just a dictator."

Greene offered to resign. He told the convention he had heard seven states would withdraw from the NBA if he was reelected commissioner.

As tempers flared, reporters were asked to leave the meeting. After adjournment, reporters were told by NBA executive secretary Harvey Miller of Washington, D. C., that Greene was given a unanimous, rising vote of confidence.

Duke Drops Two Football Players

Durham, N. C., Nov. 14 (AP).—John Montgomery, senior quarterback from Miami, Fla., and Thomas Harris, junior halfback from Charlotte, N. C., have been dismissed from the Duke University football squad, it was announced here today by Coach Wallace Wade.

Montgomery and Harris left the squad without permission immediately after Duke's 35-0 victory over George Washington in Washington Saturday and did not return to the campus until this morning, the Duke mentor said.

Oklahoma Moves Up To Second

By Paul D. Williamson

Notre Dame, which had a tougher time beating North Carolina than the 42-6 score indicates, retains top rank in the Williamson System, but Army, which had the scare of its football life before one-pointing Pennsylvania, 14-13, drops from second to fourth.

Unbeaten Oklahoma, 27-7 conquerors of Missouri, moved up to second and California, also unbeaten, slid up to third.

Rice stayed at fifth place and idle Virginia remained at sixth. Michigan and S. M. U. swapped places fro mthe previous week, to take over the seventh and eighth spots.

In Debut as Redskins Coach

Ball's 'Try Anything' Style Makes a Hit

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

In spite of the high mortality rate among head coaches of the Washington Redskins, plus a 44-21 defeat in his debut, a long and successful term in office loomed for Herman Ball yesterday.

Ball, the fifth Redskin coach in seven years, lost his first game at the helm to the champion Philadelphia Eagles Sunday. He figured to lose to a powerful Quaker City outfit which has dropped only one game all year and routed the Redskins, 49-14, in an earlier engagement.

President George Marshall was hardly pleased with the outcome, but he liked the performance of the Ball-coached Tribe in many particulars.

"We are never satisfied with a loss," Marshall said yesterday, "but we haven't much to be ashamed of after Sunday's loss. The guys played their hearts out under Ball. They made mistakes, of course, and you can't do that against smart clubs like the Eagles."

Observers were united in their satisfaction with Ball's "try anything" system. Those who realized that the Redskin squad lists 11 first-year men, against the Eagles' three, didn't expect miracles and enjoyed watching Ball's change of pace.

He tried both Rookie Harry Gilmer and Sammy Baugh in the quarterback slot, found Gilmer mor eeffective and stuck with him.

He switched his defenses several times.

He used Baugh and Gilmer in the same backfield.

He tried the Eagles' own brand of pitch-outs, resulting in a Redskin touchdown on "Crazy Legs" Harry Dowda's 21-yard sprint in the third period.

Ball, it was agreed, joined his players in doing everything their inexperience, size and talents would allow toward beating the Eagles. They fell short. So have a lot of other clubs this year.

BRIEFLY—The Chicago Bears come to town this Sunday, needing a victory over the Redskins to stay in the race for Western honors . . . An 85-piece band from Allegany High, in Cumberland, Md., will be on hand to honor the Redskins' new head coach, who led that school to three unbeaten seasons between 1936 and 1942 . . . Damages to Bosh Pritchard, Eagle running ace, can be laid to teammate Frank Kilroy as much as to the Redskins . . . The big guard "piled on" once too often Sunday . . . Coach Ball thinks the Eagles' third offensive play of the game, with the Philadelphians needing 10 yards on third down, was a decisive one . . . A Tommy Thompson-to-Jack Ferrante pass barely made a first down at that point and the Eagles marched on to a 7-to-0 lead . . . Three of the five Gilmer passes intercepted by the Eagles were costly to Washington . . . One led to a field goal, another to a touchdown, and the third halted a Redskin march on the Eagle 36. Wingman Herb Shoeer of the Redskins hung up some sort of speed record by tackling the Eagles' Clyde (Smackover) Scott from behind after a 39-yard gain in the second period.

Curb Needless Cost, Hospitals Warned

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Wilmington, Del., Nov. 14 — Dr. Paul R. Hawley, executive chief of the Blue Cross-Blue Shield health care plans, today urged hospital workers to help police against "unnecessary" medical costs.

He warned that such policing is necessary to prevent voluntary medical care plans from "being priced out of their most important market, the low-income groups." In that event, he said, "We shall have compulsory health insurance."

Dr. Hawley, former medical director of the Veterans' Administration, spoke at the opening session here of the ninth annual conference of the Maryland-District of Columbia-Delaware Hospital Association, the first such conference since Delaware was admitted last year to the association.

More than 300 hospital workers, from administrators through the ranks of the semi-skilled, are attending the meetings, which will end Tuesday.

Other speakers at the General Assembly and at sectional meetings held today told of operation room explosion hazards and the "Rochester plan" to spread city hospital service to rural areas.

Dr. Hawley likened the relationship of Blue Cross medical care plans and the hospitals to that of a grown child to its parents.

"It is high time," declared Dr. Hawley, "that we reach a firm family agreement. Not one policy for hospitals and another policy for Blue Cross.

"Too often, the hospital house staff orders every conceivable test an roentgenography from the scalp to the toes," he declared, warning against excessive costs against Blue Cross patients.

"When a patient carries no insurance and must pay out of his pocket for such examinations, due caution is usually exercised. But the Blue Cross is fair game. There is that curious defect in public morality which makes it no crime to gouge an insurance company."

But since medical insurance has no protective laws such as those against arson for fire insurance companies and barratry for Marine insurance companies, Blue Cross "is wholly at the mercy of hospitals and doctors for protection against abuses," he declared.

He urged elimination of hospital luxury services; insistence on adequate reimbursement for public services in the care of the indigent; education of doctors, nurses and hospitals that abuses of health insurance only raise its costs and Government or other subsidy of the training of doctors, nurses and technicians.

"Hospitals must be kept in a healthy condition," Dr. Hawley warned. "So must Blue Cross. The disease of excessive cost is highly contagious. If one member of the family contracts it, the other is sure to get it. If both get it you may be sure we'll be quarantined forever by the Federal Security Administration."

Dr. Basil C. MacLean, Director of Strong Memorial Hospital, Rochester, N. Y., told the group about the "Rochester Plan" for the provision of rural health services. Under the plan, metropolitan area hospitals unite with small outlying hospitals to provide city services to rural areas.

Schmelzer Named

Dr. George J. Thomas, anesthesiologist at the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine, warned the hospital workers against explosion hazards in hospital operating rooms. Such hazards, he said, usually have their base in the type of floors of the operating and anesthetia induction rooms.

"Only the grace of God" has permitted American hospitals a low record of one explosion for every 100,000 inductions "under today's explosion-fraught practices," he declared.

Leo G. Schmelzer, Administrator of Garfield Memorial Hospital, Washington, was inducted as president of the group at a luncheon here today. He succeeds Benjamin W. Wright, Superintendent, Memorial Hospital, Cumberland, Md.

Officers elected today at the same meeting include Sister Marie Antonella, Administrator at Georgetown University Hospital, Washington, second vice president, and John D. Martin, Administrator at Columbia Hospital for Women, Washington, as an alternate delegate to the American Hospital Association.

Wexberg to Speak

Dentists Hurt, Dentists Agree By Telephone

Hypnosis, anathetics and "air dents" notwithstanding, when the dentist sneaks up on you with the whirling burr, you are likely to get hurt, 7000 dentists agreed last night.

This unfavorable conclusion was the result of a national telephone discussion including members of the District Dental Society at the Professional Arts Building, 17th and I sts., nw. The novel idea which in last night's operation took in 138 cities, is sponsored by the University of Illinois College of Dentistry.

Dr. H. G. Wolff, professor of neurology at Cornell University, talking to the far-flung dentists, discounted the hypnosis idea. This method, he said, usually confuses the operator as much as the patient. The "air dent," he explained, works on the principle of sand blasting. His suggestion for more painless dentistry: keep "tools" out of sight.

Dr. Edward J. Ryan, Evanston, Ill., dentist, voiced some comfort for the younger generation. Painless dentistry, he thinks, can be accomplished by early and consistent care of teeth before cavities get too big.

All dentists were in accord when it came to doing something to reduce the patient's apprehension about dental visits. They believe, though it may be far-fetched, that a thorough explanation of just what is going to be done with what instrument will make the trip easier.

Also comforting was the opinion that anathestics take effect in 99 of every 100 cases where it is administered, a figure most patients conclude is much too large.

ish surgeons traditionally disavow the title "Doctor") took a special instrument and drove it into the lower right chamber of Claude's heart.

Gingerly the instrument was threaded through the great valves in the heart itself toward the stricture near the top of the heart. There, Mr. Brock knifed through the too-tight valve in the pulmonary artery. Thus he cleared the way for a fuller flow of blood to the lungs, and hence more oxygen in Claude's blood.

Two and a half hours later the heart wound had been sewn, the chest closed, and Claude was back in a special "blue baby" recovery room.

Afterward, Hopkins surgeons said the operation was "very satisfactory," although they emphasized that of necessity such a major operation carried with it a critical period of 48 hours.

Barring unforeseen complications, they expect recovery to be smooth, his life expectancy lengthened and his "exercise tolerance" (their phrase for the normal life of a vigorous boy) far greater.

Scheele Hits Slum Areas in D. C., 5 Cities, as Disease Cells of communicable diseases per 1000 population was 65 percent higher in the blighted areas than elsewhere in the city.

"Cleveland discovered that one small slum area, occupied by less than 3 percent of the population, needed 8 percent of the city's total public health budget for the control of disease and other services.

"In Denver, the infant death rate in low-quality housing districts was more than five times that in the best districts, and juvenile delinquency was more than twice as high.

"And on the West Coast, Los Angeles' slums breed tuberculosis rates nearly eight times higher than the better districts, and venereal disease rates 13 times as high."

A "Supreme Tragedy"

Dr. Scheele said the "supreme tragedy is that so much of this costly illness and death are clearly preventable."

In tuberculosis control, he said, "the public health agencies have fought a long battle. We now have tuberculosis in full retreat. But the ultimate victory will be retarded by housing conditions that do nothing but favor the spread and perpetuation of this age-old disease.

"Now with victory within sight, is it any wonder we look to the housing program to help us free this generation—not some generation yet unborn—from tuberculosis!"

Dr. Scheele described the National Housing Act of 1949 as "one of the most significant pieces of health legislation passed during this decade."

The act's broad implications, he added, "are breathtaking. We in the United States can rejoice that at last the deep desire of the American people for safe, healthful, decent homes has triumphed over selfish interests."

The Public Health Service, Scheele said, anticipates a great increase in requests from State and local agencies for assistance in the development of programs for the promotion of healthful housing.

Forward steps in this direction, he asserted, would be "analysis of State and local laws for enforcement of housing standards" and "training personnel in an adequate method of appraising housing quality."

In the next decade a united effort by housing and health authorities can "speed the conquest of some of the nation's most stubborn causes of death and disability," he added.

"In many of this Nation's blighted areas, infant mortality and death rates from communicable diseases are still as high as the national rates of 50 years ago.

"Housing and health united can share in saving at least 70,000 lives that would otherwise be sacrificed to home accidents, due to housing defects," he said, adding:

"Slums of the future are already being built in urban fringe areas where inadequate housing has been thrown up to supply overwhelming demands. The provisions of the Housing Act for urban redevelopment should greatly strengthen the hands of health officials in dealing with these problem areas."

Longevity Promotions Are Ordered Effective For 15,000 as of Oct. 30

The estimated 15,000 Federal workers who are eligible for the new longevity promotions will get them as of October 30.

These additional pay boosts are mandatory on the agencies. Civil Service has cautioned the agencies not to delay approving them for their employes who are legally entitled to the promotions. Any employes passed over must be given the raises retroactive to October 30. This is a Civil Service decision.

The longevity raises apply only to the first 10 GS (general schedule) grades and all 10 CPC (crafts, protective and custodial) grades. The general conditions for the increases are as follows:

An employe must have completed three years of continuous service at the maximum of his grade; he must have an efficiency rating of "good" or better; his agency must certify his service and conduct as "satisfactory," and he must have had in the aggregate at least 10 years of service in his present position, or an equivalent or higher grade.

The longevity raises are the same amounts as the respective in-grade promotions. Only three longevity promotions are possible, one every three years over the maximum pay rates of the 20 grades. Past service can be credited toward the longevity boosts, which means that some employes will soon be receiving a windfall of several hundred dollars a year.

Regulations to govern the longevity raises will be issued soon by Civil Service, but in order to get the promotions in effect promptly the commission will answer questions from the agencies.

POSTAL LONGEVITY: The Postoffice Department has cleared up many questions on longevity boosts for postal workers in an official bulletin which reads in part:

Each officer and employe, other than postmasters, in a single salary grade, who has completed 13 years in the postal field service, shall be advanced to the first longevity grade; those who have completed 18 years will go to the second longevity grade and those who have completed 25 years will go to the third longevity grade. The effective date is November 1.

Service in other Federal agencies won't count toward the postal longevity raises. All postal field service is creditable, however. Also creditable is military service, provided the employe left his postal field job for the military service and returned to it after his discharge.

Postmasters are eligible for the longevity boosts. However, the department has advised them that the promotions won't be effective for them until an official revised salary schedule for them is prepared. Also included for longevity raises are supervisors, assistant postmasters, superintendent in the motor vehicle service whose salaries are fixed by the department, grades 9 and 10 postal inspectors, those supervisors in the Railway Mail Service whose salaries are designated by grade, "and other officers and supervisors who are in positions to and from which automatic promotion is not provided."

EXPANSION: The Budget Bureau is reported to have approved a substantially larger budget for Civil Service's classification division. The recommendation will go to Congress in January.

The classification division recently lost about 50 employes in a reduction of force. But the pay-reclassification act gave the division and the commission far greater authority over the classification of Federal jobs than it ever had before. Branch classification offices will be set up in all Civil Service's regional offices.

PEOPLE: At Housing and Home Finance, these key appointments have been made in the new division of Slum Clearance and Urban Development: G. Raymond Meade, chief of cost review; Charles L. Farris, chief of field operations; James E. McCormack, chief of the land branch, and Carl L. Feiss, chief of community planning and development . . . Former Senator James M. Mead will be sworn in at 11 a. m. tomorrow as a member of the Federal Trade Commission . . . Dr. William Bale has taken leave from the University of Rochester to join Atomic Energy's division of biology and medicine . . . Dr. F. F. Bradshaw will discuss the employe attitude survey at a meeting at 7:30 p. m. today of the Society for Personnel Administration in the Archives Auditorium.

Plan Aired To Purify River Area For Play

Sanitation Aide Outlines Sewage Program to Halt Pollution Problems

Harold A. Kemp, District director of sanitary engineering, yesterday outlined plans to reclaim the Potomac River above Key Bridge for unrestricted recreation, including swimming safe from pollution.

That section of the river is the only natural water resource in the metropolitan area which can be made safe for swimming, he said. He expressed the hope that it can be done in 10 years.

Kemp, who is also chairman of the Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin, was guest speaker at a luncheon meeting of the Washington Building Congress.

Hopes For Settlement

He said he hoped for final settlement before the end of the year of engineering plans for an intercepting sewer in Maryland from the District line upstream to Great Falls.

His department and engineers of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission are agreed that such a sewer should be built to obtain a safe river in that section and protect it, he said.

All sanitary sewage should be collected in the intercepting sewer, brought downstream and discharged into the District's upper Potomac River intercepter, he said.

Looks to Virginia, Too

Sewage pollution must also be eliminated from the Virginia side, Kemp said. He declared he felt sure that Fairfax and Arlington Counties, whose officials are now studying pollution control, would, after a reasonable time, stop discharging pollution into the river, "provided we keep it out of this side."

For protection of the river above Great Falls, the District looks to the Interstate Commission for cooperation, Kemp declared. New sewage treatment plants are being built or planned by Winchester, Va., Hagerstown and Frederick, Md., he said.

The sanitary engineering director said even 100 percent treatment of sewage in the area—an "impossibility"—would not make for safe swimming in the Potomac River below Key Bridge, the Anacostia River below Bladensburg, or Rock Creek below Piney Branch.

Recreation in 10 Years

However, he said, he hopes that within 10 years the Potomac River between Key Bridge and Fort Foote and the Anacostia below Bladensburg can be made clean enough for all recreation except swimming. Below Mount Vernon, the Potomac can be made safe for swimming, he added.

The population growth here and the increasing use of home garbage disposal units will force the District to expand its sewage treatment rate in the near future, Kemp said, estimating that 10 million dollars in capital improvements to the sewage plant will be necessary within 10 years.

Eventually, the home garbage units will mean an additional load of 50 percent on the District's sewage treatment plant, and means of handling this extra load are now being studied, he said.

SE Business Unit Opposes Rights Bill

Cost of Measure Cited by Group; Zone Rule Passed

The Southeast Businessmen's Association last night voted unanimously to oppose the passage of Senator Matthew M. Neely's bill calling for the establishment of a Commission on Human Rights in Washington.

Meeting at the Donohoe Real Estate Co., 314 Pennsylvania ave. se., the 29 members present opposed the measure on the grounds that it would be an unnecessary expense to the people of the District.

The association also adopted a resolution asking that the owner of property to be rezoned be notified 60 days in advance by a personal letter indicating the street number as well as the lot and square of the property involved. The motion also asked that zoning proposals be determined within 30 days after a hearing.

Merchants operating businesses on 8th st. se. between M st. and Pennsylvania ave. requested that parking meters be installed on that portion of 8th st.

Citizens Group Told A. U. Building Plans

Dr. Paul F. Douglass, president of American University, outlined a proposed building program with the "immediate" construction of a $225,000 sport center, to members of the American University Park Citizens Association last night at Hurst Hall.

Dr. Douglass said the university also plans to add a recreation and education center, as well as dormitories, to the campus at Nebraska and Massachusetts aves. nw. He added the school will continue to petition for permission to construct a faculty apartment house on Massachusetts ave., although the association has opposed rezoning of the area.

The association contributed $50 for a war memorial in the sport center.

Glover Park

James H. Flanagan, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, last night urged citizens to attend the current arbitration proceedings between Capital Transit Co. and its union employes.

Flanagan told the Glover Park Citizens Association at Stoddert School, 39th and Calvert sts. nw., the proceedings would furnish citizens valuable background to help them understand hearings on fare increases before the PUC.

Kalorama

David Brewer Karrick, president of the Fidelity Storage Co., was elected president of the Kalorama Citizens Association last night at the Adams School, 19th and California sts. nw. He succeeds Fletcher Tilton, president for the past two years.

George R. Littlehales and Ernest Greene were elected vice presidents, Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, treasurer, and Margaret Trewhella, secretary. Tilton and P. J. Pedersen were appointed delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

SPECTATOR EXAMINES CRUSHED DEATH AUTO.

Driver Is Charged in Crash Causing 1 Death, 3 Injuries

District traffic deaths, 1949 ... 63
Deaths this date last year 60
Total traffic deaths, 1948 67

One man died, three persons were injured, and one was charged with manslaughter as result of an auto-truck crash early yesterday at 11th st. and Maryland ave. sw.

The dead man was Wallace Jones, jr., 32, of the Dunbar Hotel, who, police said, was thrown out of the auto, and crushed when the trailer truck rolled over him.

Manslaughter Charged

Driver of the auto was Dan Wadsworth Lee, 25, of 1426 12th st. nw., police said. He is in serious condition at Gallinger Hospital with head injuries. Police placed the manslaughter charge against him and also one of failing to yield the right of way.

Police said Lee and three other passengers were pinned inside the auto which was crushed against a retaining wall by the truck. One passenger, Maude Davis, 24, of 512 1st st. nw., was in Emergency Hospital yesterday with face and leg injuries. She was reported in good condition.

Another, Harmond Winston, 25, of 2015 15th st. nw., was treated at Emergency for cuts and bruises. She was released. The third, Helen Jones, 25, also of the Dunbar Hotel, but no relative of the dead man, was uninjured.

Police said the driver of the truck was William C. Sloop, 25, of Wilkesboro, N. C.

Alice Milton, 38, of 619 Maryland ave. sw., was in Emergency yesterday with possible internal injuries. Police said she was a passenger in an auto driven by Roy T. Lamb, 51, of 478 Maryland ave. sw., when it collided at 4th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw., at 6 a. m., with a car driven by Aloysius Gardella, 35, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Florence Brewer, 73, of 1301 15th st. nw., was seriously injured yesterday at 15th st. and Massachusetts ave. nw. She went to Emergency with a fractured left leg and head injuries, and later underwent surgery. Police said she was struck by a cab driven by George H. Jackson, 34, of 2219 N st. nw.

Released by Rescue Squad

A rescue squad was called to extricate Harry W. Roof, 55, of Laurel, Md., and his wife, Minnie, 45, from a shower of candy, mustard and pickles. Police said their panel truck overturned at 11th st. and Pennsylvania ave. se., after a collision with a dump truck driven by James Fletcher, 31, of 3228 Grace st. nw.

Mr. and Mrs. Roof were treated at Casualty Hospital for cuts and bruises, and released. Police said he is a wholesaler of candy, pickles and condiments. Fletcher was charged with passing a stop light.

2 Suspects Flee Companions, All Seized in $427 Robbery

Two alleged stickup men ran to police for protection from two companions with whom they refused to share the $427 proceeds of a robbery—and then walked scot-free from the police station.

This story came out yesterday after all four were finally arrested and booked for the robbery.

Held by Municipal Court Judge George D. Neilson for grand jury action in $3000 bond were Aubrey L. Mayhew, 22, of 714 E st. se., and T/Sergt. Earl M. Harbaugh, also 22, of Fort Myer.

Similarly booked for robbery at the Fifth Precinct station, but not yet arraigned, were Bryant O. Pearce, 34, of 316 18th pl. ne., and Anthony J. Petro, 33, of 3507 Varnum st. ne.

Mayhew and Harbaugh appeared at No. 9 about 5:30 a. m. Sunday, nearly 12 hours after the home of Jesse M. Davis, retired fireman, was robbed of $427 in his home at 225 15th st. se.

They told the desk clerk they were being pursued by two other men who were trying to rob them. Just then, police said, Petro sauntered in, explaining to the clerk that he and a friend were "after these two for fooling around with a woman out in Maryland."

At this, Mayhew and Harbaugh went along with Petro's story, and all four exited together, laughingly telling the policeman it was "all a mistake."

But several hours later, Mayhew and Harbaugh phoned Pvt. Bernard J. Panetta of the Fifth Precinct, saying they were being threatened with death. They "turned in" not only themselves but their alleged threateners, Pearce and Petro. All four were speedily picked up.

Mayhew and Harbaugh said, according to detectives, that they went into Davis' home while Pearce and Petro waited outside in a car. They evaded Pearce and Petro on quitting the house, however, and were not found by their friends until several hours later.

Mayhew and Harbaugh jumped from the car when they were threatened with death, police said they were told, and headed for the safety of the station house.

Escaped Convict Located in Jail

An escaped convict from a West Virginia road gang has been located in the Alexandria jail, police reported yesterday.

He was listed as William Aubrey Thompson, 34, of Bluefield, W. Va., who is serving a 15-day sentence for trespassing. Investigation disclosed, police said, that Thompson, alias Herbert Stubbs, escaped from a road camp of the West Virginia State Penitentiary on July 19.

He was serving one to ten years for grand larceny.

Lane to Ask Truman Aid On Speedway

D. C.-Baltimore Road Seen as Cutting Time From Friendship Airport

Relief of the congested National Airport through provision of the Baltimore expressway connection with Baltimore's new 2500-acre Friendship International Airport will be urged upon President Truman by Maryland's chief executive.

Robert M. Reindollar, chairman of the Maryland State Roads Commission, revealed last night to newsmen who toured Maryland roads yesterday that Gov. W. Preston Lane, jr., has telegraphed President Truman requesting an audience at which he could discuss such a solution of the loaded traffic problem at the National Airport.

Chairman Reindollar said it is expected the Governor will meet with President Truman within 10 days.

Less Than Half Hour

The roads chairman pointed out that Baltimore's new airport, which has a direct connection with the Baltimore-Washington expressway, has an area of 2500 acres and adequate runways are being provided to care for heavy air traffic. Through use of the Baltimore-Washington expressway, traffic can run from the airport to Washington in less than half an hour. The expressway will have no grade crossings and only occasional entrances so that traffic will not have to stop, he said.

Maryland expects to complete its portion of the road from Baltimore to Jessups, Md., by 1951 at a cost of 15 million dollars, he said. The remaining 13½ miles to Washington is to be completed by the Federal Government under a gentlemen's agreement reached with the late President Roosevelt, he said.

Road Program Discussed

Chairman Reindollar discussed the 200-million-dollar Maryland road building program at a dinner held as part of a tour of new roads and reconditioned roads in Montgomery, Prince Georges, Howard and Anne Arundel Counties which have been completed or are under construction this year. The road projects aggregate approximately 13 million dollars in the 1947-48-49 program.

The newsmen toured East-West hwy., Wisconsin ave. and Rockville pike to Damascus and thence to the eastern section of Montgomery through Sunshine and Olney to Silver Spring and Takoma Park. In the afternoon the new section of Queen's Chapel rd. and Ager rd. at Hamilton ave. and other Prince Georges County roads were toured, followed by a trip to the beginning of the Baltimore expressway, where they saw one fill is using 400,000 cubic feet of earth, enough to put a 4-foot surface on 21 miles of road.

Central D. C. Crime Reports Recommended

Justice Group Cites Necessity for More Thorough Reporting In Assault Study

The Washington Criminal Justice Association yesterday strongly urged more thorough reporting of the disposition of criminal cases in the District.

It recommended that a central recording system be established to show action by police, the United States attorney, grand jury, courts, penal and parole authorities in every criminal case.

The recommendation, contained in a report on the disposition of aggravated assault cases after police had made arrests, was indorsed by United States Attorney George Morris Fay. Police Chief Robert J. Barrett could not be reached for comment.

'Peculiar Phenomena' Cited

The association report said it made an "exhaustive study" of aggravated assaults cases after discovering a "peculiar phenomena" in 1948 crime figures.

"While the volume of serious crime reported to the police and solved by arrest showed a marked increase of several thousand cases, the number of indictments returned by the grand jury during the year showed a decrease from previous years," the report said.

The ratio between arrests and indictments "seemed most pronounced" in the aggravated assaults category, the report states. The report added that the association study indicates:

Of 4047 aggravated assaults reported to police, arrests were made in 3008 instances, or in 75 percent of the reported cases.

2657 Adults Arrested

Of the 3008 arrests, 2657 were arrests of adults. In about 44 percent of the 2657 cases, "no papers" were issued by the United States attorney's office. This means, the report added, "when the case is presented to the office of the United States district attorney by the police, it is decided that the evidence does not justify the filing of charges and the case is not presented in court."

The report also states that only 14.3 percent of the 2657 cases in which police made an arrest resulted in conviction of the suspect for the offense originally charged or a lesser offense.

However, the report proceeds to state factors which explain or limit or raise further questions as to the discrepancy between arrests and convictions. The report includes the following:

"In making an arrest, the accused person is usually charged with the most serious offense indicated at the time of arrest . . .

"When the evidence is reviewed by the prosecuting agency, it may be indicated that the original charge is not justified and the possibility of successful prosecution is greater on a lesser offense.

"Many of the aggravated assault cases reported are found to be domestic quarrels where the victim, after considering the entire problem, desires not to prosecute.

"In cases where little or no physical harm is inflicted in the assault, juries might be hesitant to indict or convict on a felony charge.

"Any analysis of serious crime in the District of Columbia must take into consideration the changes in police reporting procedures adopted during 1947.

". . . The public should be kept accurately informed about the volume of crime and its treatment by each public agency through a central recording system.

"The nucleus of such a system exists in the statistical recording equipment now available at the police department; this department should be a service unit for all agencies dealing with crime in the community."

(Ed. note: The police department, in July, 1947, inaugurated a new crime reporting system, after The Washington Post revealed that hundreds of reports were being "pocketed" and excluded from annual reports of crime.)

Animal Story

Panther Rips At Mink Coat On Air Show

A completely unscheduled and unrehearsed thrill bounded into the lunchtime "Nan and Bill" radio show over Station WQQW yesterday when a pet panther suddenly attacked a mink in the studio—mink scarf, that is.

The scarf's owner screamed, Nan and Bill were so flabbergasted that she remarked, with microphones open, "Hell, you get him out of here." The panther's owner, Robert Hicks, 3901 Connecticut ave. nw., fought with the animal to rescut the scarf.

Jim Miller, the announcer, also joined the rescue of the mink scarf. And station engineers, watching goggle-eyed through a glass panel, were too surprised to cut the commotion off the air.

No Publicity Stunt

Newspaper city desk men, when told of the affair, cynically questioned, "Oh, yeah, a publicity stunt?"

All participants swear that it was not. And the evidence seems to bear them out.

Nan Garcia and Gregory (Bill) Costello interview personalities, one after another, on the lunchtime show, sandwiching in music and announcements.

Mrs. Francis I. McGarraghy, of 1202 Portner rd., Alexandria, was first guest, telling of the efforts of the Smith College Club of Washington to raise funds for scholarships. She told of a benefit magic show to be presented three times next Saturday at Lisner Auditorium for the fund.

Irritated by Leash

Her mink scarf—six skins—was hanging over her chair as she finished her talk.

Hicks, a professional animal trapper, was to be next on the show. With Spottsy, the five-and-a-half foot panther, he was waiting in the studio.

Spottsy, unaccustomed to his surroundings, according to Hicks, and slightly irritated at a chain leash, suddenly sprang at the scarf, and the turmoil started.

"I was so surprised I didn't know what to say at first," Carmichael said. "Then I started to describe it as best I could. Nan and I did a recorded show last summer in a cage with 12 lions. So I told her, 'Nan, why don't you do something to get him out of here?' and she came back, 'Hell, why don't you get him out?' with accent on the 'you.'"

Panther Led Out

Hicks got his pet under control and led him out. Miss Arlene Sparks went on and managed to sing "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes."

Mrs. McGarraghy pulled herself together and went back to her ticket booth at the Willard, hoping the incident would sell more tickets. Hicks took Spottsy back to the Zoo, where the animal is a temporary boarder.

And then there was the reaction of M. Robert Rogers, the station manager. He said he thought only: "'Are we insured against panthers?"

They are.

Alumni to Meet

Dr. James Creese, president of the Drexel Institute of Technology in Philadelphia, will be guest of honor at a dinner meeting of the institute's Washington area alumni at 7 p. m. today at the Metropolitan Club.

Francis S. Friel, Philadelphia consulting engineer, a member of the institute board of trustees and chairman of the Drexel Alumni Appeal, will also be a guest.

Family, Homeless by Fire, Given New House by Friends

Bay Head, Md., Nov. 14 (AP).—Fred W. Meyer and family have a new home today, just one week after their last one burned down.

The house came from Glen Burnie, 20 miles away. A new well was thrown in, too, to boot.

It didn't cost him a penny.

Everything—the house, the house moving, the labor, new foundation and the well—was contributed by friends and, as Meyer said, "some other people I don't even know."

All they saved when their house went up in flames last Sunday were a television set, a stove, refrigerator and a heater.

"But we didn't know what we were going to do about a place to live," said Meyer, a mechanic at the United States Navy Experiment Station.

A friend told J. Edgar Glover, an Annapolis contractor, about Meyers' plight. Glover said he had a house he would give him, but it was in Glen Burnie. The building had been a filling station office, he explained, but it might serve temporarily.

The Mueller Contracting Co. of Severna Park sent a truck and special trailer for the moving yesterday. About 20 volunteers pushed the building from its floor at Third and Light sts. in Glen Burnie onto the trailer.

With police escort, the house moved slowly to its destination, where it arrived safely and by noon was lowered on its new foundation already prepared by some of Glover's employes and Meyer's friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Meyer and their children, Charles, 17, John, 14, and Frances, 6, are now preparing to move in. They're still living with friends.

No Increase Seen in Tax Rate By Falls Church School Loan

Approval of a $700,000 bond issue for new schools in Falls Church still would leave the tax rate below the level in effect before the city gained its independence from Fairfax County.

This was predicted by Joseph W. Seay, a member of the city school board, at a public rally held last night in the Madison School in the interest of the proposed bond issue. Falls Church property owners will vote in a public referendum on the expenditure Saturday.

Seay said the cost of amortizing the bond issue would bring an increase of 25 cents in the local tax rate, boosting it to $4.80 on the $100 valuation. Before Falls Church separated itself from Fairfax County in August, 1948, taxpayers laid out a combined city and county tax rate of $4.85.

Operation of the two schools Falls Church proposes to build would not necessitate any further tax increase, according to School Superintendent Irvin H. Schmitt. Any increase in operating, Smith said, would be offset by elimination of tuition fees now paid by the city for students attending the Falls Church High School.

Under a recent court decision, Fairfax County retained title to the high school even though it is within the new city's limits.

An estimated 200 persons turned out for the rally, sponsored by the city school board and no opposition to the bond issue was expressed. School officials said they were "pleasantly surprised."

Of the score or more speakers who indorsed the school building program, the most applause was drawn by a 16-year-old Falls Church High School student, James Beard.

Beard, a member of the Falls Church Junior Civic League, told the assemblage: "The education we're getting in our schools today is what we're depending on to equip us for the responsibilities of citizenship tomorrow. If you people won't vote for the bond issue Saturday you're going to have us kids on your necks."

Earlier yesterday, Beard had announced that he and other teenagers would act as baby sitters on Saturday to enable parents to get out and vote for the bond issue.

U. S. Workers Greet Shah Wednesday

Government employes will be excused early Wednesday to greet Mohammed Reza Pahlevi, the Shah of Iran, on his arrival in Washington.

Donald S. Dawson, administrative assistant to President Truman, said yesterday that heads of departments and agencies have been directed to excuse those employes in the area of the procession whose services can be spared. No charge will be made against annual leave.

District Commissioners announced last week that municipal workers will be let out at 4:15 p. m.

The 31-year-old Shah is scheduled to arrive at National Airport at 4 p. m. where he will be met by President Truman.

The procession will form at the airport and enter the District over Memorial Bridge. The caravan of cars will round the Lincoln Memorial and proceed along 23d st. to Constitution ave., east on Constitution ave. to 12th st. and north on 12th st. to Pennsylvania ave.

Commissioner John Russell Young will present the royal visitor with the keys to the city when the procession halts briefly in front of the Veterans Center at 14th st. and Pennsylvania ave. The cars then will continue by Pennsylvania ave. and 15th st. to Blair House.

The Metropolitan Police Band will provide music at the reception stand at 14th st. Other bands will be stationed along the route.

Justice Vinson to Speak

Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson, an alumnus of Centre College, Danville, Ky., will be the guest speaker at 6:30 tonight at a dinner of the college's Washington alumni section in the Burlington Hotel.

The Business II Unit of the 1950 Community Chest campaign yesterday reached 45 percent of a $241,781 goal and set off an intensified drive to gather the rest in the next 10 days.

Unit Chairman Aaron Goldman, reporting total pledges of $108,815 from 4839 contributors, urged unit workers to "see your prospects." "Let's get the job done," he said.

He reminded workers attending a unit luncheon at the Washington Hotel that the campaign closes officially a week from Wednesday and the unit is still 55 percent short of its goal.

Red Feather Oscars were presented to Team Capts. Grahame T. Smallwood, Coleman Diamond, Kenneth G. Clarke, Mrs. Maurice Goldberg, Harry Ager, John Ames, W. I. Peeler, P. V. Van Hise, Benny Bortnick and E. J. Lewis.

Today the Business I Unit will lunch at the Washington Hotel and hear from John A. Reilly, president of the Second National Bank and former president of the Washington Board of Trade. At the same time the Residential Unit will meet separately to hear Mary Haworth, columnist of The Washington Post.

Addition Approved For Beers School

An eight-room addition to Beers Elementary School, 39th st. and Alabama ave. se., was approved yesterday by the Board of Education buildings and grounds committee.

Costing $433,220, the addition contains an auditorium-playroom and other recreation facilities, which are expected to be ready for the new semester in February when the 400 students now attending on half-day schedules will be put on full time.

Tsuneo Matsudaira

Tokyo, Nov. 14 (AP).—Tsuneo Matsudaira, 72, president of Japan's House of Councillors and former Ambassador to the United States, died of a heart ailment tonight.

He served as imperial household minister from 1936 to 1945 and was close to Emperor Hirohito.

Arlington Visiting Nurses Bring Solace And Expert Care to Homes of Patients

The Washington Post

By Judy Spivak
Post Reporter

Arlington's Instructive Visiting Nurses, like their counterparts in Washington, bring more than bedside care to their patients.

"We feel our nurses are teachers as well because they help people to help themselves," says Mrs. Martha E. Flynn, director of the Arlington association, a Red Feather agency.

"There's a morale factor, too," Mrs. Flynn adds. "The patient and his family feel happier thinking, 'There's a young person coming in to help me.'"

The five nurses on the association's staff, all graduates in public health work, serve all who call on them for help from Arlington and nearby Fairfax.

Charge Is $2 or Less

The charge is $2 a visit, if the patient can afford it, nothing if he can't.

The Visiting Nurses' thousands of home visits yearly are an alternative to expensive hospital nursing care for hundreds of patients and mean, too, that patients don't have to be sepatre dfrom their families.

Take the 10-year-old girl who spent three weeks in the hospital, following an appendectomy, as bills pyramided, because complicated dressings were needed for a stubborn wound.

Her mother, a working widow, found out about the Visiting Nurses through pamphlets in the public library. Sick with worry, she appealed for help, got it, and was able to bring her daughter home immediately.

Work With Babies

Over a third of the visiting nurse's job has to do with new babies. She gives advice on proper diet, clothes and exercise before the baby comes. Afterwards, she helps young mothers make formula, bathe and hold the baby, even fold the diapers.

Many patients are elderly, often chronically ill. She bathes them, changes dressings, and helps the relative who cares for them.

With Mr. D., though, there was no relative. Fifty-six, he was so crippled by arthritis he could barely hold a pen. He managed nonetheless to support himself by selling greeting cards by telephone from his bed.

Daily visits from a visiting nurse, coupled with the help of other roomers who brought his meals, helped him continue his courageous efforts.

J. R. Hobbins Of Anaconda Dead at 63

Butte, Mont., Nov. 14 (AP).—James R. Hobbins, president of the Anaconda Copper Mining Co., died of a heart attack here today. He was 66.

Mr. Hobbins

He was stricken while at lunch with officials of the company and was rushed to St. James Hospital where he was pronounced dead.

Hobbins and other New York officials of the company arrived here Friday on a routine inspection tour.

Just before his death, Hobbins had ordered full-scale resumption of the Greater Butte Mining Development project, part of which has been suspended since June 6.

Hobbins joined Anaconda—which with its subsidiaries is believed to be the world's largest copper producer—in 1922. He became a vice president of the company in 1940.

He was born in Madison, Wis., in 1883, and attended the University of Wisconsin. He lived in New York City and is survived by the widow and one daughter, Mrs. A. B. Harris, Scarsdale, N. Y.

GPO Printer Drowns On Fishing Trip

Glenn William Seaman, 51-year-old Government Printing Office linotype operator, has been declared the victim of an accidental drowning.

Mr. Seaman

The body of Mr. Seaman, missing since about 11 a. m. Sunday from his cabin cruiser at Selby-on-the-Bay, Md., was found floating in the bay about noon yesterday, Anne Arundel County police reported. The certificate of accidental drowning was issued by Medical Examiner John M. Claffy.

Mr. Seaman, who lived at 214 Massachusetts ave. ne., went aboard his boat Sunday at a pier at Woodland Beach. He said he intended to go fishing.

His wife, Mrs. Jessie Ruth Seaman, 47, an employe at the Naval Gun Factory, had intended to accompany her husband on his cruise, but at the last moment decided the water was too rough, and stayed on land with her granddaughter, Glennis Marie Miller, 4, of 519 E. Custis ave., Alexandria.

About half an hour later, Mrs. Seaman said she saw her husband's boat "going around in circles" between Selby and Lock Haven Beach. It later crashed into a pier at Selby.

Mr. Seaman, a native of Winfield, Kans., had been in the printing business since 1908. He came to Washington in September, 1941, to accept the job he held at his death. He was a member of King Solomon Masonic Lodge here.

Besides his wife, he is survived by a son, James B., 4207 74th pl., Bellemead, Md.; a daughter, Mrs. Glennda Miller, of the Alexandria address, and his father, William J. Seaman, Winfield, Kans.

Heart Attack Is Fatal to A. Margolius

Albert Margolius, 43, Washington furniture merchant, died of a heart attack in Emergency Hospital yesterday morning.

Mr. Margolius

Mr. Margolius was stricken at his store, Capitol Furniture Co., 639 Indiana ave. nw. He died a few minutes after one of his employes brought him to the hospital.

His brother, Bernard Margolius, was called soon after from a District Court gambling trial, where he is a defense attorney for William "Snags" Lewis.

A Washington native, Mr. Margolius lived at 6201 Nebraska ave. nw. He has been in the furniture business in Washington most of the time since his graduation from Central High School.

Mr. Margolius was a member of the Progress Club and of B'nai Jacob Congregation.

Father of Two Sons

He leaves his widow, the former Rose Levin of Washington, whom he married 21 years ago, and two sons: Phillip, 13, and Stanley, 22 months.

Besides Bernard Margolius, he is survived by two other brothers, Emanuel Margolius, 3711 Jenifer st. nw. and Julian Margolius, 1650 Harvard st. nw.; a sister, Mrs. Edna Kasnett, 419 Decatur st. nw.; and his father, Wolf Margolius, of the Decatur st. address.

Hyattsville Man

A. L. Johnson Found Victim Of Drowning

A certificate of accidental death by drowning was issued yesterday after the body of Arthur L. Johnson, 54, Hyattsville builder, was found along the Patuxent River, near Pig Point, Anne Arundel County, Md.

Mr. Johnson

Dr. John M. Claffy, county medical examiner, said the body was found early yesterday and showed no signs of foul play. Mr. Johnson had been missing since October 31 when he left his son on shore to take a final trip alone in his boat before storing it for the winter.

Dr. Claffy said the motor on the 14-foot plywood boat probably failed during the cruise and the vessel capsized. The body was found about 13 miles south of where the trip began, near Upper Marlboro, Dr. Claffy said.

A former resident of Berwyn, Mr. Johnson lived at 3901 Jefferson st., Hyattsville. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Juanita Winston Johnson; a son, Bernard Neil Johnson, 21; a daughter, Juanita Margaret Johnson, 10; two brothers, Maurice E. of 518 72d st. and William H. of 103 72d pl., both in Carmody Hills, Md., and two sisters, Mrs. P. E. Bagley and D. W. Carroll, both of Norfolk, Va.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday at 2 p. m. at the Chambers funeral home, Riverdale, Md. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Burial Rites For Dr. Chaney Set for Today

Funeral services for Dr. Eugene Chaney, Baltimore psychiatrist and a frequent visitor here, who died Sunday of a heart ailment at his Baltimore home, will be held at 11 a. m. today at the Tickner & Sons funeral home in Baltimore.

Burial will be in St. James Episcopal Cemetery at Lothian, Anne Arundel County, Md.

Dr. Chaney, who retired from active practice in 1932, had been in declining health during the past year.

A native of Bristol, Md., he traveled widely and after medical studies at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, attended the Universities of Goettingen and Heidelberg and the Berlin Neurological Hospital in Germany.

Returning to this country, he specialized in psychiatry and neurology at Johns Hopkins, the Milwaukee Sanitarium in Wauwatosa, Wis., and the Winnetka (Ill.) Sanitarium, of which he was director until his retirement.

He also was a visiting doctor for a time at the Queen Square Neurological Hospital in London.

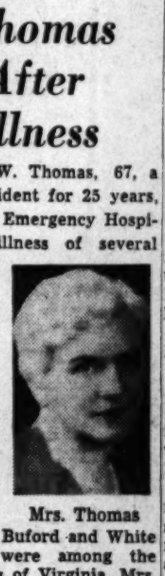
Dr. Chaney knew several languages and was an avid collector of rare books. He was a fellow of the American Medical Society.

During the last 12 years, he spent much of his time in Bristol, Md., where he operated a tobacco farm.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Susan Chaney, and a sister, Mrs. Milton H. Courtney of Bristol. He is also survived by several nephews and nieces.

Mrs. Thomas Dead After Long Illness

Mrs. Mary W. Thomas, 67, a Washington resident for 25 years, died Sunday at Emergency Hospital after an illness of several months.



Mrs. Thomas

Mrs. Thomas, who lived at 8034 16th st. nw., was the widow of Charles E. Thomas of Thomasville, N. C. She was born in Lynchburg, Va., September 10, 1882. She was a descendant of the Buford and White families, who were among the founding fathers of Virginia. Mrs. Thomas was a member of the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church.

Funeral services for Lieut. Col. Jack H. Tyler, 110 N. Thomas st., Arlington, will be held at 2 p. m. today at Fort Myer Chapel with three generals among the honorary pallbearers.

Tyler's body was found Thursday with his head wedged under the first rung of the ladder at the Walter Reed Hospital swimming pool. A certificate of death due to drowning was issued by the deputy coroner, who listed Tyler as a suicide. Tyler was in the office of the Army Chief of Engineers at Gravelly Point, Va.

Burial, with full military honors, will be in Arlington Cemetery. Honorary pallbearers will include Gen. R. A. Wheeler, former chief of engineers; Maj. Gen. Lewis A. Pick, present chief, and Maj. Gen. R. C. Crawford, deputy chief.

Viscount Runciman

Chathill, Eng., Nov. 14 (AP).—Viscount Runciman of Boxford died today after an illness of two years. He would have been 79 on Saturday.

A former president of the British Board of Trade, he went to Prague in 1938 in an attempt to mediate a dispute between the Czech government and the Sudeten Germans.

In 1899, Runciman defeated Winston Churchill in an election for the House of Commons at Oldham.

Runciman was reputed to be one of Britain's wealthiest men. His father, who was made a baronet in 1906 and elevated to the peerage in 1933, built up one of the world's largest shipping businesses.

When he first became president of the Board of Trade in 1914, Runciman was assigned the task of restoring order in the dislocation that had fallen upon the transport system of the United Kingdom. He juggled with railways and fleets of steamers and by commandeering numerous meat-carrying vessels outwitted a beef trust which had attempted to corner the commodity.

His son, W. W. L. Runciman married Katherine Schuyler, daughter of the late William R. Garrison of New York City, in 1932.

Msgr. Hugh Monaghan

Msgr. Hugh J. Monaghan, 83, pastor of the St. Ambrose's Catholic Church in Baltimore for 24 years, died yesterday at Mercy Hospital, the Associated Press reported.

The clergyman was chaplain of the Ancient Order of Hibernians and was a former chaplain of the Knights of Columbus. A native of Ireland, he came to Baltimore in his early teens and was educated at St. Charles College, Ellicott City, Md.; St. Mary's Seminary in Baltimore, and Catholic University in Washington.

MORNING COUGHS
Often Due to Bronchial Asthma
Do you cough and cough, especially mornings and at night? Do you choke, gasp for breath, wheeze and often can't sleep? The cause of these devitalizing symptoms may be recurring attacks of Bronchial Asthma. In such cases, the very first dose of MENDACO usually starts right now, working through the blood and thus reaching lungs and bronchial tubes, to help relax that clogged up stuffy feeling in the bronchial tubes, then helps Nature loosen and clean out thick, strangling phlegm. This helps you get good fresh air into your lungs and promotes restful sleep. Ask your druggist for MENDACO now. Satisfaction or money back guaranteed.

Girl, 14, Rescued After Night in Woods

Tupper Lake, N. Y., Nov. 14 (U.P.). A 14-year-old girl lost in dense woods during last night's rain and snow was found alive today near her father's hunting camp.

Truman Is Whiz At Political Quiz, Women Voters Agree

By Genevieve Reynolds

PRESIDENT TRUMAN won a badge and title as the Nation's No. 1 Quiz Whiz yesterday when he made a perfect score on Missouri's voting requirements.

On the back of the tag which the President received for his 100 percent accuracy is "Politics is Everybody's Business."

The questions were put to the Chief Executive by Miss Anna Lord Strauss, president, National League of Women Voters, during a noon interview at the White House. Accompanying the league head were the national board of directors now in session here at the YWCA.

Answering as a Missouri voter Mr. Truman said that he did not have to register before each election and that he had permanent registration. He pointed out Missourians can vote by absentee ballot due to recent laws passed by the State Legislature.

To the question, "How can I join a party, when and where?" President Truman advised women to start in the precincts and work up from the "grassroots," according to Miss Strauss.

At the same time Mr. Truman cautioned women to steer clear of "splinter parties." He told the league head that third parties and "splinter groups" cause divided responsibility in the Nation.

Miss Strauss said that President Truman emphasized the importance of the two party system as basic to American politics.

While commending the league for its campaign to encourage greater citizen participation in politics, the Chief Executive suggested that league members get out and work for either the Democratic or Republican Party.

The quiz with Mr. Truman was the league's kickoff campaign to induce more citizens to enroll as active workers in political parties. Launched simultaneously was the league's new booklet, entitled, "What's the United States To You."

Plans are under way to conduct similar campaigns in each State with Governors taking the quiz as did President Truman yesterday.

League officials and staff members attending the quiz with Miss Strauss and President Truman were Mrs. Harold A. Stone of Arlington, first vice president; Mrs. John G. Lee, Hartford, Conn.; Mrs. James G. Scarborough, Los Angeles, Calif.; Mrs. Bradford L. Patton Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. Charles E. Heming, New York; Mrs. Anne Hartwell Johnstone of this city; Mrs. Allan C. G. Morris, Rossford, Ohio; Mrs. Waldo E. Stephens, Oklahoma City; Mrs. Maxwell W. Barus, Montclair, N. J.; Mrs. Eugene W. Burgess, Minneapolis, Minn; Mrs. M. E. Cummings, Pittsburgh Pa.; Mrs Leonard Haas Atlanta, Ga., and Mrs. Moses H. Lurie, Belmont.

At a week long conference the board of directors will map out plans for the 1950 convention scheduled for April 24-28 at Atlantic City. Their plans will be formulated from suggestions sent in from members of the 730 local leagues in the country.

Optimism in France

FRENCH people have regained their optimistic outlook. Fear has vanished from their minds. They are making plans for the future. This was the cheerful picture seen by Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador, on a recent trip to her homeland.

"In contrast to two years ago, there is great hope," she told members of the Woman's National Democratic Club in a luncheon speech yesterday. "This great hope was brought about by the United States through the Marshall Plan and the signing of the Atlantic Pact."

According to Mme. Bonnet, the black market has disappeared completely. Now poultrymen sometimes offer 13 eggs to the dozen. Except for coffee and sugar, no foods are rationed. Mme. Bonnet found all railroads repaired, trains running on schedule; bridges and ports repaired; steel production upped 120 percent over 1939 output.

By 1952 a new dam will be completed which will double the badly needed electrical supply in the Rhone Valley, Mme. Bonnet said. The dam will be France's Tennessee Valley Authority, furnishing irrigation to the southern part of the country, explained the ambassadress.

Mme. Bonnet cited wages, cost of living and housing as France's main problems now. She pointed out that the government is trying to reduce the cost of living rather than raising wages. And to ameliorate the housing shortage, new construction is being initiated and rents gradually raised to permit the landlords to make necessary repairs.

"Desire for security and unification of Europe is strong among the French people," she explained. "The French people know that without unification of Europe peace will be impossible."

Madame Bonnet expressed the hope that after Europe is unified there will be an Atlantic Community of Nations to include the United States.

Emphasizing that all French people are grateful and appreciative of American aid, she said, "Our people know that it is through your generous help that we have been able to maintain our independence and freedom."

At the conclusion of the speech Madame Bonnet presented a tapestry picture to the club from the French Gratitude Train. She made the presentation to Mrsfl Julian Friant, club president, as "a French woman, not as an official."

Orchid to Pedestrian

MRS. GEORGE C. THORPE, prominent Washington social and civic leader, yesterday was awarded an "orchid" as the second "elderly pedestrian of the week" by Traffic Inspector Arthur E. Miller. Occasion was a luncheon meeting honoring new members of the Women's Safety Committee, American Automobile Association, at the Mayflower Hotel.

The orchid recipient is chairman of the committee. She won the award when she wisely stepped back on the curb when the green light turned to caution, and waited for the next walk sign. Traffic Officer Rudyard Y. Hesse observed the incident at the busy intersection of 14th and F sts. nw. on November 10.

Weekly elderly pedestrian awards will be made throughout November and December as part of the Commissioners Traffic Advisory Board's efforts to reduce the high fatality rate in traffic accidents in the over 60 age group.

MEETING TODAY:

The Curley Club's first meeting of the season will take place at 8:15 p. m. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James J. Corbett, 5039 12th st. ne. The Rev. E. Robert Arthur of St. Matthew's Cathedral will address the religious discussion group . . . The Advisory Council of the Maryland Federation of Women's Clubs will meet from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. at Southern Hotel, Baltimore, Md. .

'Largest Sum Ever' Raised By Hadassah

San Francisco, Nov. 14. (AP).—Hadassah, the women's Zionist organization of America, raised $9,443,186 the last twelve months for its work in Israel and the United States, the annual convention was told today.

Mrs. Abraham Tulin of New York, the national treasurer, reported to the 1000 delegates and guests gathered for the second day of the four-day convention that this was the largest sum collected in a year by the group since its founding in 1912.

It exceeds by $535,254 the amount taken in last year.

James G. McDonald, United States Ambassador to Israel, cabled appreciation of "the heroic sacrifices being made by the people of Israel to carry through their full program in gathering of the exiles."

Yesterday, President Truman messaged the convention that he hoped America might give constructive assistance to Israel and other lands through his "Point Four" program for aiding underdeveloped areas.

Oscar L. Chapman, newly appointed Secretary of the Interior, read Mr. Truman's message and lauded the program as one which opens up new "vistas of security, peace and well being."

To Address C. D. A.

"United Nations in the Field of International Trade" will be discussed by Uruguayan Minister Counselor J. A. Lacarte at the meeting of the Catholic Daughters of America, D. C. Court 212. The program will proceed a business session tonight at 8 o'clock at the Catholic Daughters clubhouse.

Spanking Clean House Awaits The Shah

By Marie McNair

PROSPECT HOUSE, on Prospect ave., leased by the Government as an official residence for visiting dignitaries, is going through last-minute touch-up operations today.

The home of Mrs. James Forrestal and the late Secretary of Defense will get its final run-over with vacuum and dust mop before Iran's young Shah moves over from the Blair House on Thursday. The Shah will arrive in Washington Wednesday, spend that night at Blair House as the guest of President and Mrs. Truman.

His Imperial Majesty Mohammed Reza Shah Pahlavi will sleep in the large guest room at Prospect House with a view of the winding Potomac River from south and east. He will breakfast—if he comes downstairs—in the muraled dining room and will be served on the State Department china—white, banded with gold and adorned with the department's official gold seal.

House Ready and Waiting

PROSPECT HOUSE is just as Mrs. Forrestal left it when she sailed for Europe this fall. The picket fence about the garden is a spanking white. The white iron grill work on the double veranda is freshly painted and in the double terraced garden there's a single pink rose blossom.

Inside, the wide floor boards are waxed to a mellow gloss. There's a deep carpet in the hallway and in the big drawing room, while throughout the lower floor handsome crystal chandeliers and sconces catch the lights filtering through long windows. Built in 1788 by John Templeman, Prospect House is one of the handsomest residences in that part of old Georgetown. The rooms are spacious and high-ceilinged, and built on various levels.

A carved mahogany four-poster bed with toile canopy should send the Shah off to pleasant dreams. In this room there's an olive green velvet-covered chaise lounge to match the rug, an antique highboy with a patina-like old stain, and a kneehole desk with leather top.

Memories of the Owner

FIREPLACES are in every room and twin Adam mantles flank the bay window in the drawing room. His Imperial Majesty's staff will presumably occupy the other four bedrooms. In the late Mr. Forrestal's room, a mahogany secretary holds the books he liked to read. There one finds Harold Laski's "The American Democracy," and a volume prophetically titled, "To the Bitter End." Rose and white chintz, a sleigh bed, chintz-covered and draped with a white lace canopy, and a lace-skirted dressing table, label this room as that of the mistress of Prospect House.

Downstairs, with windows looking onto the garden, is the library, an informal room with well-worn green leather sofa and leather chairs in red and green. Antelope antlers mounted against the deep green walls, with JVF etched into the plaques, attest to Mr. Forrestal's ability as a huntsman. Framed by the fireplace are postage-stamp pictures of members of the Meadow Brook Hunt with Mrs. Forrestal astride her hunter.

Housekeeper Isn't Flustered

IT'S A COMFORTABLE, livable house, with Josephine Forrestal's artistic hand seen in every room. And presiding over it all to see that the Shah gets his tea and toast on time, is efficient Mrs. Victoria Geaney, housekeeper at Blair House.

Her office is on the ground floor where a switchboard has been installed to facilitate the handling of incoming and outgoing calls. Taking it all in her stride, Mrs. Geaney will have a staff of nine domestics during the Shah's stay. In addition to the four regulars—cook, parlor maid, upstairs maid and houseman—there will be two butlers, a pantryman, a kitchen aide and another maid for the upper floors.

Supper Party

A BUFFET supper was given last evening at the home of the Press Attache of the Turkish Embassy, Nuzhet Baba, and Mme. Baba. The Ambassador of Turkey and Mme. Erkin were ranking guests.

Exhibit Today

MARCELLA COMES, well-known artist, will have an exhibit of her paintings at Chequire House, 202 King st., Alexandria, Va., opening with a tea today from 4 to 6. The exhibit will continue through December 17. Miss Comes is Mrs. Randolph Winslow in private life.

Mass Will Honor Philippine Regime

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Quirino of the Philippine Embassy announce that a solemn high mass will be celebrated tomorrow at 10 a. m. at the Cathedral of Saint Matthem the Apostle to implore God's blessing on the new administration of the Philippine government.

Mr. Quirino is Second Secretary at the Embassy and he is the nephew of President Elpidio Quirino.

There will be a reception following the mass at the residence of the Philippine Minister and Mrs. Emilio Abello. The reception will also celebrate the 57th birthday anniversary of President Quirino.

Santa Claus Rates a U. S. Wife, but the Brave Shah Of Iran May Get a Ghost

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

THIS DEPARTMENT has done a great many peculiar things but this is the first time its ever been called upon to act as sidekick to Father Christmas.

In today's mail was a British postmarked envelope addressed as follows:

"Mrs. George Mesta
(Father Christmas)
c/o Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer,
c/o Washington Post,
405 Lexington ave.,
New York 17,
America."

We couldn't resist opening it. Inside was a letter plus a Christmas card enclosing a piece of notepaper printed in childish handwriting and a snapshot of a very young boy, a nice looking woman leaning over him and, in the background, a huntsman mounted on a white horse.

The letter explains that Michael Gardner, age 7, saw an article we wrote about Mrs. Mesta last spring in Parade, the snappy publication which comes for free in The Washington Post (The Lexington avenue address is Parade's office). Illustrating this literary masterpiece was a photograph of Mrs. Mesta with, for one reason or another, a number of toys in the offing.

Uncle Passed the Buck

SINCE MICHAEL'S father has been in the hospital for four months with a nervous breakdown, his uncle, a bus conductor and author of the explanatory letter, prudently told him that Father Christmas was in America. Michael, smart for his age, put two and two together. Seeing the picture of our Minister to Luxembourg complete with toys, he decided she was Father Christmas' wife!

Michael isn't so far out of line, at that. Anyway, here's part of his own letter. "I am just 7 years old and have a brother, named Barry, who is 5 years old, and we would like a train and lines and some nice sweets and comics for Christmas. We have been good boys and Uncle Will said you have a lot of nice things in America and Daddy can't afford much this year as he has been poorly for a long time. Please send me a letter and I am sending you a picture of Mama Barry and me watching the fox hounds."

The mystery of how Michael laid hands on Parade and The Washington Post is explained by Uncle Will. The latter buys old American newspapers to give the comics section to his nephews who, in turn pass them on to friends at school. (We were rather hoping, of course, that a British bus conductor was avidly buying up old copies of The Washington Post, searching for them with the passion of a true connoisseur for the pleasure of reading the Thayer column.) Suppressing our disappointment, we forwarded the letter to Mrs. Mesta.

Should anyone care to send trains, lines, sweets or comic books to Michael, here's his address. Michael Gardner, c/o William J. Gardner, 62 Barnwell st., Kettering, Northants, England.

P. S. Uncle Will is saving up, "if the money problem allows," to take a trip over here in a few years.

Too Brave for the Shiver

NOT SO LONG AGO the Shah of Iran was wounded by a would-be assassin. Seconds after the bullet penetrated the royal shoulder, the Shah lunged toward his assailant exclaiming: "What a damn poor shot!"

Since the Shah is so obviously a brave young man, he won't be disturbed by a more-than-ordinarily-nebulous ghost which on rare occasions haunts the Forrestal house where he is to stay as Government guest. Actually, the ghost is a very nice apparition who wouldn't harm a fly, much less a Shah.

The Forrestal Prospect avenue residence was built by Franklin Steele whose eldest daughter, Mary Chase Steele, married George U. Morris and lived in her father's house until she died. During her later years Mrs. Morris became a spiritualist. Her convictions were so strong that she told her friends she intended to return to her home after death.

At that time the house passed to Ted McCauley and eventually was rented to a tenant who knew nothing about Mrs. Morris or her spiritualistic predilection. Shortly afterward, this tenant invited Mrs. Herbert Howard, Mr. McCauley's sister, to tea.

"Could there be a ghost in this house?" the tenant asked. Mrs. Howard said "No."

House Isn't Changed Much

"WELL, THE FIRST night I spent here I was reading in bed," the hostess recounted. "It was late and suddenly I heard footsteps on the stairs. It sounded exactly like the footsteps of an old woman. I got out of bed, opened the door into the hall—no one was there."

So, perhaps Mary Morris, out of other-world curiosity, had returned to inspect the first stranger living in her beloved house, after all.

New School Boasts Comforts of Home

By Norma Lanum

"THE comforts of a good home . . ." Just how would you interpret that?

That's a phrase in the will of the late Julius Garfinckel which provides $3,500,000 for the Hannah Harrison School of Industrial Arts.

And a preview glimpse of the newly completed school at 4468 MacArthur blvd. reveals that a very comfortable interpretation of that phrase has been applied.

The will of Julius Garfinckel, founder of Garfinckel's department store, called for establishment of "a school and home in which worthy women dependent upon their own efforts for their livelihood may obtain proper training in useful arts and industries and, at the same time, may have the comforts of a good home."

Comfort Is Assured

SO COMFORT is just what the students of this modern school, slated to open March 1, 1950, will have.

While receiving their free-of-charge training in retailing, commercial foods, needy trades and secretarial techniques, Hannah Harrison students will enjoy living accommodations just about as pleasant as any private girls' school.

Of course, they will be asked to share the responsibilities of maintenance and operation of the household, but all the most modern kitchen equipment and architectural design of the building will make that easy.

Each student will have her private room with built-in desks, bureaus and closets. A democratic school government body will regulate any curfews and other restrictions which may be necessary. But a recreation room and a man's cloakroom is being built in the basement, indicating the students will lead a normal social life.

Few Rules

"I DON'T want to have any rules, except those which would provide for safety with our equipment," says the school's director, Miss Augusta Clawson.

"For the most part our students will be mature women who need more specialized training in order to provide for themselves and their dependents as the case may be. And we'll expect them to act like mature women."

The women will remain at the school for a few weeks, six months or a year or more—whatever length of time it may take them to master their trade.

The interior decoration of the Hannah Harrison School—named for Mr. Garfinckel's mother—has been designed by Ethel Pilson Warren, with the emphasis on white mahogany blended with rusts, greens, golds and browns. And, plenty of fireplaces.

Fireplace Is Large

A FIREPLACE of limestone brick stretches across the entire width of the immense living room-library, which will house 1300 volumes from Mr. Garfinckel's library and a grand piano.

French doors along the rear hall of the first floor open out to a flagstone terrace and farther out to the site of a proposed badminton, croquet and volley ball court.

Sponsored by the Smart Knit Shops, the event will feature two types of knitted garments—thost done in yarns of various textures, and those of Ruban d'Art, the tiny ribbon which has opened a new field in hand-knitting.

America 'Just Like Movies, Only More So', Says Greek Teen-Ager

By Peggy Preston

AMERICA is just like it is in the movies—only more wonderful, more exciting, more thrilling.

That's the view taken by one of the cutest teen-agers ever to reach these shores. She is Irene Salvago, 17, of Greek birth and now a resident of Alexandria, Egypt. In town for a brief visit, she is accompanied by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Constanin Salvago, and her uncle, famed Paris Designer Jean Desses.

"My friends and I in Alexandria always thought your American films were propaganda, that life here could not be so marvelous," the petite 17-year-old explained. "But I've found it is all exactly as they pictured it, and I've written my friends that it is all completely true."

Skyline Measures Up

WHAT, FOR INSTANCE? Well, there is the New York skyline (which left Irene completely breathless) . . . the beautiful, well-dressed girls and women, so neat and poised . . . famous actors, writers, industrialists gathered in clubs and restaurants, and all ready to give one an autograph for the asking . . . the houses in the suburbs, each one lovelier than the last, and all joined by a friendly, common lawn. No fences! That's what took Irene's fancy.

Irene and her family flew into Washington yesterday, after a 10-day whirl of Manhattan, to attend a party and fashion show in Desses' honor given by Julius Garfinckel & Co. at the Mayflower Hotel.

"Today, I flew in an airplane for the first time, saw the White House, the Washington Monument," she enumerated rapidly. "Tomorrow there are the museums to see, a party at the Greek Embassy, and the shops—I must visit the shops!"

Likes Teen-Age Fashions

ASIDE FROM THAT SKYLINE, of course, the shops hold the greatest fascination of anything she's seen yet for Irene. The teen-age departments in the stores, stocked with colorful, gay, inexpensive items impress her the most. "Now I know why all the young American girls are so well dressed and attractive—just as they are in the motion pictures," said Irene. "Everything is available to them at prices they can afford. That is not true now in Europe."

On Wednesday the group will leave for Dallas and thence to Hollywood. The movies again, this time with real, live actors and actresses. "I am not, as you say, an autograph hound," Irene declared. "But I will get some autographs in Hollywood, otherwise my friends at home will never believe I've met all those people."

CLOUDS of fragile pink tulle, embroidered in pearl dew drops, is visioned as a perfect debutante gown by Jean Desses, the Paris designer who is in Washington for a brief visit. The debut dress pictured above, along with several more Desses originals of this season, were shown yesterday at the cocktail party given in the designer's honor at the Mayflower Hotel by Julius Garfinkel & Co.

EXQUISITE fabric and novel lines are combined in this short evening dress by Desses (right). Gray lace is embroidered in silver and gold threads to create an encrusted effect. A separate stole can be worn wrapped high around the shoulders or tossed carelessly across them in the traditional manner.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Sweethearts Started Quarreling as Soon as Wedding Date Was Set; With Invitations Out And Bridal Gown Ready, They Broke Up; Why?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 22, considered good looking, and hold down a fairly decent job. Until recently I kept steady company for a period of two years, one of them in being engaged, to a girl who is employed as a model,—she being considered very attractive also.

After setting our wedding date for October 6th past, we started arguing violently and often, over such things as money, her family, my not giving her enough attention, and various other petty matters. Two weeks before our pending marriage we had our most violent argument.

All had been arranged for a quite large and elaborate wedding, invitations had been sent, banns were announced in church, her bridal gown was ready, etc., when suddenly the world seemed to blow up in our faces. After three days of bitter quarreling and hurling accusations at each other, we ended up with a broken engagement.

Man Denies He Jilted the Girl

TRYING for another chance, I called her to apologize for everything I had said, some of which was very cruel. Mimi was willing to forgive, but refused to make amends for her wrongs unless I professed my love for her, which I refused to do—don't ask me why, for I don't know. Perhaps it was pride or obstinacy.

Not reaching any reconciliation, we made public the cancellation of our wedding, she claiming I jilted her, I claiming the opposite. Now that almost two months have passed, I can neither forget nor stop loving her. On meeting her in public places I can still feel the spark in me, and I know that she is eating her heart out, too, over the terrible mistake we made.

Should I try again to get her back? Can we undo what is done? And if we should marry, is there a chance for the happiness we could have had? Or are there too many strikes against us? And what of the people we know—what will be their opinion of us, if we make up after all this? We have created quite a scandal already, and reunion would give the gossips more fat to chew on. Help me if you can, and answer soon. F. C.

Man Was Battling Like Hooked Marlin

DEAR F. C.: Several sessions of first-hand psychological probing would be required to uncover the reasons why you started fighting Mimi as soon as the wedding date was set,—but even without knowing what those reasons are precisely, still we can plainly see you were making trouble for a purpose.

From the time you found yourself being reeled into the last mile of ritualistic preparation for marriage, you were fighting the proposition as wildly, as blindly, as a hooked marlin fights the fisherman on the other end of the line. It was something you felt you hadn't promoted, hadn't reckoned on, and definitely weren't ready for.

In presenting Mimi, you say that she is very attractive and employed as a model—not that she is the girl you love. This indicates that you are more honest than you realize.

Commonplace Way of Forcing Break

COMBINED with other aspects of the story, it suggests that you don't love Mimi; and I believe that is the reason why you could obstinately refuse to give her the lover's assurance she asked, after the crucial quarrel. Also I take it to mean that you unconsciously engineered the series of petty quarrels leading to the explosion that blasted the wedding plans into the ash can, to permit your zero hour escape from "pending marriage."

In the beginning it was rosy achievement from your viewpoint to rate dates with a lovely model, I daresay and greater achievement, sweet to your ego, to eliminate other contenders from the field, until finally you were her fiance. But after that, as she began earnestly to collect, as it were, for her exclusive allegiance to you, you were gripped by anxious resistance, which blighted your bliss, caused you to see Mimi and her family with jaundiced eye, hence to neglect her, haggle over trifles, etc.

Of course you jilted her, in the sense of forcing a break by indirect tactics, which is the average Lothario's way out of a corner—and you are eating your heart out since, only because you'd like to have her as a sweetheart still. But you don't want her as a wife,—either because you're not ready to marry or because you're afraid of women, really; afraid to love, lest it mean "unconditional surrender" to a vampire boss. Thus what you need is inside help, via psychology, to give you rational control of your emotional power house. M. H.

Eating Know-How Lengthens Life Span for Millions in U. S.

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—Food executives reviewed their industry's half-century of progress today and found it impressive—but said the job of raising the Nation's food standards has only just begun.

"There is still far too much food that is poorly prepared and unappetizingly served on the dinner tables of this country," said H. J. Heinz 2d, president of the large food packing company bearing his name.

He was opening-day luncheon speaker at the forty-first annual meeting of the Grocery Manufacturers of America.

"We can do much to make better cooks out of the American housewife," he said. "We have taught her to use the industry's products at a great saving of time and labor. We have done an effective job of selling variety, flavor and condvenience.

"But we should do more to cultivate a wider appreciation for good foods well prepared and attractively presented."

George A. Sloan, president of the Nutrition Foundation, Inc., told the grocery executives that during the past 20 years greater progress has been made in the science of nutrition than in "all the centuries which have passed since Hippocrates."

"America's death rate is now much lower than at the turn of the century," he said. "This means that approximately a million of our countrymen will not have to die this year, because of progress made in the conquest of disease since 1900. The science of nutrition has contributed its share to this advance."

During the next 50 years, said the head of the research foundation, financed by food industry members, "we may approach that goal of health in which the cause of death may be nothing more frightening than old age. In that time to come, man may live in comparative comfort, free of illness to the end of a greatly increased span of years."

About Static Electricity

Could you tell me, please, what dress and slip materials are likely to give trouble because of static electricity, and what, if anything, can be done about it? A. L. G.

Some fibers do have a greater tendency to develop static electricity than others. Woolens and acetate rayon (the rayon which sticks when ironed with a hot iron) are the most likely to develop static electricity; cotton the least. Temperature and atmospheric conditions enter into the problem, also, because electricity develops most readily in cold, dry weather. Then, too, individuals differ in the amount of electricity in their bodies. A very full skirt tends to build up electricity faster because of the motion of the skirt.

Now, what to do about it? Wearing a cotton slip with woolens sometimes helps. When you take a garment off which has static electricity, shake it until it snaps to dispel the electricity. Someone has advanced the suggestion that if you would sew a piece of Christmas tinsel to your underskirt it would help to dispel the electricity. Such an idea is used on mimeograph machines to prevent the sheets of paper from sticking together due to electricity.

We recently moved into a new house and the oak floors are not varnished. The builder put two coats of wax on and let it go at that. Could you please tell me the best way to clean these floors before rewaxing them and also if these unvarnished floors will wear well. How many coats of wax should be used? E. A. G.

If the floors are very soiled go over them with varsol or one of the noninflammable waterless cleaners used for dry cleaning clothes. Using this type of cleaner is better than applying water to the floors, because water will raise the grain. If the floors are only slightly soiled or soiled in heavy wear areas, you can remove it by wiping with cleaning and polishing wax (so labeled). This is a semiliquid wax and when wiped while wet will soften and remove old wax and the soil with it. It is excellent for cleaning floors which are soiled only at heavy wear areas.

For the initial waxing session, I would suggest applying three or four coats of wax. Make each coat thin, allow to dry completely and buff it until you have a hard, dry finish. This can best be done if you will rent an electric buffer for the day you do the job.

A wax finish for a floor gives excellent protection to the floor while it is on, but it does wear off more readily than a shellac, varnish, or floor seal finish. If you do not have small children and have rugs which cover most of the floor, the floors will not get hard wear and a wax finish would probably be satisfactory. You will have to renew it once a month in heavy wear areas to keep a protective finish on your floors.

If, on the other hand, your floors are likely to get hard wear, I would suggest that you consider applying a more durable finish while they are new. You could use varnish as you suggest, shellac or one of the floor "seals" which penetrate the wood and give a very permanent finish. Be sure that all the wax is removed from the floor before applying the finish.

When the finish is completely dry, wax the much-traveled areas to protect the finish. When this wax becomes soiled, clean by wiping with the semiliquid wax described above.

The other evening I opened a can of paprika in the process of cooking dinner and was horrified to see little brown bugs coming out of it. This paprika had been in my cupboard about eight months or so and was used only about a week before. What were they and why were they there? Was it because, perhaps, I am not as good a housekeeper as I should be? L. J. B.

Your reputation as a housekeeper is not the least bit threatened. This sort of thing can—and does—happen to anyone. The brown bugs are probably the adult stage of food weevils which are sometimes found in cereals, flours, and spices. You may have brought them home with you in the can of paprika; if you haven't seen them anywhere else in your cupboards, that is a definite possibility. The only thing to do is to throw away the paprika.

Because these insects do thrive also in cereal-type foods, I suggest you inspect your flour and cereals to see if they may have become infested from the paprika. If so, destroy the infested food, remove all containers from the shelves and wash shelves thoroughly. When dry, spray shelves with 10 percent DDT. Until you are sure there are no more weevils around, keep cereal products stored in metal containers. The warm humid months are the time when food weevils are most bothersome. You should have no trouble now in ridding yourself of them.

I'm afraid that nothing but a bleach will remove these stains, but first you might try sponging them with carbon tetrachloride or alcohol. If you do not know if the fabric is silk or rayon, do not use alcohol, for it is injurious to acetate rayon.

Or, if the silk can be washed, you might be able to remove the marking with soapless shampoo. Unlike some soaps, this will sometimes soften and remove ink stains without setting them.

If none of these methods removes the stains, then try a bleach. Sodium perborate and hydrogen peroxide are both safe bleaches to use on silk, but if the silk is colored, you should test the effect of the bleach on the color before applying to the stain.

I have a three-piece sectional sofa upholstered in a rough tweedy-looking material—I mean it has those tweedy stripes in it. It needs cleaning and I have been wondering if I could do it myself. Could I use a detergent? How do I do it? L. J. B.

Make a jelly of the detergent by dissolving one cup in five cups of hot water. Allow to cool and whip with a beater to form a stiff lather. Mix up plenty, for you clean with just the lather. Now, apply the lather to the upholstery with a soft brush in a small area. Work it into the fabric well with a circular motion, adding more lather as needed. When this small area is clean, wipe off lather with a wet cloth and follow this by thorough wiping with another cloth wrung out of clear water. Because the success of the job depends upon the thoroughness with which you rinse, it is a good idea to have two bowls of water—one for the first wiping, the second one of clean water, frequently changed, for subsequent wipings.

When the small area is clean and thoroughly rinsed, proceed to the next, overlapping areas washed to avoid streaks and rings. When the entire piece is washed, dry as quickly as possible by turning a fan on the piece or setting outdoors in sun and breeze.

It's always wise to test the soap on the color of the upholstery fabric at an inconspicuous spot before starting the shampooing.

Presbytery Backs Scot for Pastorate

By Martha Hall
Post Reporter

The Presbytery of Washington City yesterday gave its approval to New York Avenue Presbyterian Church's plan to call the Rev. George M. Docherty as its pastor.

New York Avenue church voted to call Mr. Docherty, now pastor of North Church, Aberdeen, Scotland, after a congregational meeting on November 2.

At an October meeting, the congregation failed to approve the Scottish clergyman by the required 75 per cent, but the election was later declared "illegal because of inaccuracy."

More Than 50 Considered

At a special meeting of the Presbytery yesterday at National Presbyterian Church, Connecticut ave. and N st. nw., Verne C. Bonesteel, a member of the New York Avenue Church committee on pastor, said more than 50 men were considered for the post before the committee agreed to present Mr. Docherty's name to the congregation.

Frank E. Edgerton, also a member of the committee, said that at the time Mr. Docherty spoke from the New York Avenue pulpit last he was in a sense a candidate for the pastorate. The committee's interest in him as a candidate developed after they had heard him preach, Edgerton said.

Asked whether the congregation knew whether Mr. Docherty would accept the pastorate, George E. Worthington, a third member of the committee, expressed the belief that "Docherty feels strongly that the call should come from God" and said his acceptance of the call is "in the hands of God."

Would Succeed Dr. Marshall

If he accepts, Mr. Docherty will be the successor to the Rev. Dr. Peter Marshall, Scottish-born pastor, who died last January at the age of 46.

In other actions, the Presbytery dissolved the pastoral relation between the Rev. B. Franklin Ferguson and the Darnestown (Md.) Presbyterian Church. Mr. Ferguson has accepted a call to become pastor of a Presbyterian Church, U. S., in Waterford, Va.

The Presbytery also gave its approval to a request by the Takoma Park, Md., Presbyterian Church to incur an indebtedness of not more than $110,000 to build church school facilities.

Segregation Blamed on D. C. Board

The Interior Department yesterday placed responsibility for racial segregation in some of the city's playgrounds directly on the shoulders of the District Recreation Board. It voiced its own opposition to such practices.

This stand was made evident in an answer to an injunction suit filed by five Negro mothers asking that racial segregation be dropped specifically at the Wheatley and Trinidad playgrounds.

The answer was filed in behalf of former Interior Secretary Julius A. Krug, named as one of the defendants in suit, in District Court, while he was still secretary.

Other defendants are the District Recreation Board, Milo F. Christiansen, superintendent of recreation; the Board of District Commissioners and the Board of Education.

According to the suit, from 1941 until July, 1949, both Whites and Negroes used the Wheatley School playground and the Trinidad playground "harmoniously and without incidents."

But on July 21, it was charged, agents of the recreation authorities called police who refused the Negro children the right to play there.

In his answer Krug said that he had no jurisdiction over the Wheatley area. He asserted he has such power over the Trinidad playground but that he has "acquiesced" in the "Recreation Board's policies" at Trinidad "because of an intergovernmental dispute" concerning jurisdiction.

Court Cites School Bias In Pulaski

Baltimore, Nov. 14 (AP).—The United States Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals ruled today there is racial discrimination in the high school facilities of Virginia's Pulaski County.

The decision reversed a ruling handed down in Federal Court at Roanoke, Va.

The higher court agreed there is no discrimination in the county's elementary schools.

The case, brought by a group of Negroes, has to do with a United States Supreme Court mandate that States practicing segregation must provide equal facilities for Negro students.

Pulaski County sends its Negro high school pupils to a school in an adjoining county.

Judge Armistead M. Dobie, writing a unanimous opinion for the three judges of the Appeals Court, said the long trip deprives the students of recreation periods and other advantages enjoyed by white pupils.

The suit was sent back to the lower court for issuance of a new order in the phase of the case involving high schools.

Better Half Tries To Mend Errors Of Her Husband

Fort Wayne, Ind., Nov. 14 (AP).—Not long after the attendant was robbed of $9, the telephone in a filling station rang.

"If the police are not called," a woman's voice said, "the man who took the money will be back with it."

A few minutes later she called again and said: "He's on his way."

Two men met Robert G. Lutz, 26, on his way to the filling station. They were the men who had taken the telephone calls—Police Detective Herbert Nitzsche and Deputy Sheriff Ed Baumgartner.

They said they found $9 in Lutz' pocket and took him to jail on a loitering charge.

Lutz said it was his wife's idea that he return the money.

Pilot Lands Bomber After 10 Bail Out

Salt Lake City, Nov. 14 (U.P.)—Ten men bailed out of an Air Force B-29 high over the western Utah salt flats tonight when one of the plane's four motors caught fire. The pilot and two other crewmen stayed aboard, put out the fire and brought the plane down safely here.

Two who parachuted were reported picked up. Rescue parties were sent into the waste land for the others.

Armed Forces' Medical Cost Faces Slash

Dr. Richard L. Meiling, medical services director for the Secretary of Defense, said yesterday the medical staffs of the armed forces must reduce expenses as a part of Secretary Louis Johnson's budget-slashing program.

He indicated an approaching cut in the post-graduate medical training programs for military hospitals, and also hinted that treatment of civilians at Army and Navy hospitals might have to be reduced.

Dr. Meiling spoke before the Society of Medical Consultants of World War II, which will conclude a two-day meeting at the Army Medical Center.

Some 38 per cent of the beds in military hospitals are now occupied by non-military patients, including 22 per cent devoted to veterans, he said.

He said he did not want to lower the standard of medical care, but added the graduate training program must be re-examined "with a view to reducing the high cost which it represents today."

One on the Aisle—

The Busy Evans Bucks Tradition

By Richard L. Coe

MAURICE EVANS—pronounced "Morris"—is one of the busiest men on Broadway.

He's starring in Terence Rattigan's double-billed plays, "The Browning Version" at the Coronet on 49th st., and he's plotting the eight-week drama season for New York's City Center.

Rattigan's short plays are bucking theatrical tradition that's not been successfully licked since Noel Coward and Gertrude Lawrence played the one-act plays of "Tonight at 8:30." One-act plays just haven't been commercial successes in this country, though so far the star's pull and the plays' workmanlike qualities have been breaking the jinx.

Strong point of the evening is "The Browning Version," which is the story of a middle-aged British schoolmaster who's not been liked in his job and is being dropped from the faculty at the year's end. In those final hours he realizes that even the student who makes him a going-away present of a book has an ulterior motive. He knows that his wife has been playing around with one of the younger masters and ahead of them both looms only bitter frustration.

This is a well-made play, not exciting but curiously stirring in its dissection of a ruined life. The characters are skillfully and surely played, especially by Edna Best, who returns to the stage as Evans' leading lady. Miss Best has a marvelously sure and expert quality in this reappearance in maturity, and watching her in both her contrasting roles is one of the pleasures of the evening.

Rattigan Confesses Error

The second play is a brief spoof, "A Harlequinade," a sketch of two stars rehearsing "Romeo and Juliet," during which Romeo learns he has become a grandfather. It is purposefully light, though not exactly riotous. Evans has a grand time hamming it, a trifle self-consciously mayhap, but, again, Miss Best is sparklingly good.

Author Rattigan, who's just returned to England, learned a lesson he says he's always known but this time didn't follow until after the first weeks of the American run. The plays had been done for a full year in London last season, with the short spoof closing the evening, in line with the classic "afterpiece." Everyone urged him to change the order of the plays, leaving the audience with the more effective serious play.

Rattigan didn't see it that way as a matter of theory and not until the third week of the New York run, after the first night reviewers had remarked on much the same idea, did he order the serious play presented last. How, 18 months after its original first night, Rattigan admits he was wrong and wonders why he never could see it sooner. "It only proves," laughs the good-looking Englishman, "that in the theater when you think you have a theory, you're just talking through your hat."

With eight performances at the Coronet now under control, Evans is spending the rest of his waking moments on plans for the municipally aided drama season for which he was appointed artistic director.

At the moment, the only production settled is Goldsmith's classic comedy, "She Stoops to Conquer," which will star Celeste Holm and Ezra Stone as the opening bill, December 28.

Miss Holm has been East between pictures and has finally decided not to head the National company of "South Pacific." She'd love to play the Mary Martin role next spring, but she'd have to sign for two years, which would keep her away too long from the Hollywood career that has had even further spurts since "Come to the Stable." So her yen to go back to live theater will have at least some fruition for a few weeks at the municipal theater. Betsy Blair will get the "South Pacific" touring role.

Evans has several leads up his sleeve about the eight-week drama season, previously handled two years ago by Jose Ferrer. But at least two of his "open secrets" have fallen by the wayside of "previous commitments," so he's holding his tongue till the end of this week.

But considering Evans' years of success in England, America and our Army, it's safe to say that New York's municipal theater could hardly have a better chance for a worthy season. Craftsmanship and care is the Evans motto.

Police Shun Responsibility In Jailing of Ill D. C. Man

Police officials will take no action against any department members in the case of Walter Harrison Johnson, it was announced yesterday by Capt. Thomas E. Edwards of the 5th Precinct.

Johnson, 64, suffering from acute diabetes and hardening of the arteries, was picked up early Sunday on a drunk charge. He was held in a Fifth Precinct cell for 14 hours before police discovered they had a teletype lookout order for him. The lookout was transmitted to all divisions seven hours before the arrest.

Charge Dropped

After the discovery, he was released and the drunk charge was dropped.

Captain Edwards said he had a written report by Lieut. William P. Barnes of the 5th Precinct.

"I do not contemplate any action," Captain Edwards said. "The lookout came in at 8:03 p. m., Saturday. We checked the arrest book, the cell block, Gallinger Hospital and the District jail. The lookout was read at the midnight roll call.

"Johnson was picked up near 1st and N sts. se. There was an odor of alcohol on his breath. He later admitted he had been drinking. He was staggering when arrested. The officers took him as much for his own protection as anything else.

Wife Notified

"There was nothing outstanding in Johnson's description to identify him. He did not tell us of his condition. When we finally tracked down who he was, we notified his wife, and we would have sent him to a hospital but the family wanted to take him home."

Johnson wandered away from his home at 723 Irving st. nw., about 3:30 p. m. Saturday. He was arrested at 3:15 a. m. Sunday and released at 5:15 p. m. Dr. George W. Adams, his physician, said he missed two customary insulin injections, one while wandering and one while in jail.

Survivors Testimony Statute Amendments Declared Void

A 1948 congressional amendment to the Survivors Testimony Act yesterday was deemed unconstitutional by Municipal Court Judge Frank H. Myers.

Myers based his opinion on the ground that "its effect is to deny these defendants due process of law is that it relates only to actions against incompetents and personal representatives of deceased persons, and provides that no judgment be rendered in favor of a plaintiff except his testimony be corroborated . . ."

Myers' opinion was expressed in writing as he ruled in favor of Lilian Wolf, executrix of the estate of the late Samuel E. Wolf, owner of a commercial property at 908 14th st. nw.

Sought Eviction

Lilian Wolf had asked a directed verdict, through her attorney, Leonard S. Melrod, which would allow her to evict Nathan and Nora Alpert, lessee of the property.

The Alperts had contended that they had an oral agreement with Wolf extending the monthly tenancy through January 31, 1950.

The original law in the District Code provided that if one of the original parties to a contract had died or was otherwise incapable of testifying, the other party would not be allowed to testify as to any transaction unless he were called upon to do so by the opposition; or the opposing party first testified as to the transaction or unless the transaction was made with an agent of the diseased and the agent testifies.

The court held that since the amendment to the old law was unconstitutional, the prior law must rule in this case.

Old Law Requirements

He held further that the Alperts could not meet the requirements specified in the old law for bringing in the alleged oral agreement as evidence.

Striking at the constitutionality of the amendment, Myers wrote: "In the instant action where the action is brought by the decedent's executrix, the defendants are precluded from raising an affirmative issue which they might have raised upon due corroboration had they maintained the action as plaintiffs.

"Legislation which in terms gives one individual certain rights . . . and denies to another similarly situated the same rights constitutes an unjust discrimination and a denial of due process . . ."

Trial of Holober, Accused Slayer, Set December 13

Trial of Charles F. Holober, accused of shooting his wife to death and then burying his infant daughter alive beside her near a Fairfax County nudist camp, has been continued until December 13.

Continuance of the trial was granted by Circuit Court Judge Paul Brown to allow further defense preparations for the 40-year-old former Washington jewelry salesman. He has pleaded innocent to two separate charges of murder.

Holober, according to police, shot his estranged wife, Frances, 37, last February 26 and buried her in a shallow grave near a remote nudist camp. By his own admission, police say, he then buried alive his 8-month-old baby, Joan, next to her mother.

32-Pound Mass. Turkey Off for White House

Holyoke, Mass., Nov. 14 (AP).—The pride of Massachusetts turkeydom, a 32-pound tom, was off for Washington today—and the White House Thanksgiving table—in a red, white and blue crate.

The owner, Lionel Mercier of nearby Granby, president of the Massachusetts Association of Turkey Growers, who will go to Washington for the ceremony, found his turkey in anything but a jovial mood as his crate was shipped by express today. His wattles, said Mercier, were warm—indicating anger.

Deposed Manager Withheld School Papers, Court Told

French S. Hufty, resident manager of the Columbia Polytechnic Institute for the Blind, refused his successor access to certain records, it was testified in District Court yesterday.

L. Clark Brown, vice president of the Union Trust Co., and a former trustee of the institution, said Hufty, who is blind, kept the records in his drawer and denied them to a successor selected by the board of trustees.

The suit brought by the operators of the institution to oust Hufty will continue today before Federal Judge Jennings Bailey.

English Child, 3, Gets Set of False Teeth

Birtley, England, Nov. 14 (U.P.)—Annie Smith, 3-year-old daughter of a British soldier, has received a set of false teeth under the national health scheme—youngest patient yet to receive them.

Annie had to have her teeth extracted when she was 18 months old because they were abscessed. Her gums hardened enough to allow dentists to fit her with a plastic set last weekend. Dentists said she would wear them until her second set of teeth arrive during the next few years.

Perpetual's Assets at Peak Of 104 Million

By S. Oliver Goodman

Assets of Perpetual Building Association soared $4,500,000 in the 12 months ended October 31 and reached a record high of $104,398,694, President Edward C. Baltz reported to shareholders at the sixty-eighth annual meeting last night.

Baltz

Perpetual continued to rank first in the Nation's building and loan field in virtually every respect.

Savings share accounts increased 10 million dollars during the 12-month period and exceeded 91 million dollars as of October 31. Surplus accounts rose to $8,500,000, a gain of $500,000. Baltz also noted that the institution at 11th and E sts. nw. now has more than 75,000 investing and borrowing members.

Plans for enlarging the association's offices were discussed and prospects are that improvements may be started during the coming year, but details remain to be worked out. Unofficially, it was reported that Perpetual may put up a new building of six to eight floors covering the present site and acquired land around it.

Shareholders reelected Samuel Scrivener, sr., Thornton W. Owen and William G. Schafhirt for three year terms. Other members of the board are Marvin A. Custis, Edward C. Baltz, Robert O. Scholz, William H. Dyer, William L. King and Samuel Scrivener, jr.

Directors reelected all officers as follows: Edward C. Baltz, president; Marvin A. Custis, board chairman; Samuel Scrivener, sr., and Thornton W. Owen, vice presidents; William H. Dyer, secretary; W. S. Martindill, treasurer; William H. Rippard, controller; Ernest A. Thomas, Henry J. Baltz and C. Gordon Rouse, assistant secretaries; Arthur L. Garrett, jr., and Tom B. Thatcher, assistant treasurers, and Samuel Scrivener, jr., general counsel.

NEW MEMBERS: Two Washington investment banking firms have been elected associate members of the Maryland Utilities Commission, President R. Roy Dunn announced yesterday. They are Folger, Nolan Inc. and Johnston, Lemon & Co. Their admission is effective January 1.

HONORED: D. Russell Myers, Washington district manager of Shell Oil Co., was honored last night with an award for 20 years' service. Seventeen other Shell employes in this district also received awards for service records of 10 to 20 years at a banquet in Baltimore. Other veteran employes from Maryland, Virginia and the Carolinas also were honored. The presentation were made by R. D. Kizer, Shell division manager, and officials from New York made brief addresses.

Bidding Asked For Baltimore Utility Issue

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—Halsey, Stuart & Co., investment banking firm, said today Consolidated Gas, Electric Light & Power Co. of Baltimore could "effect a savings" by selling its planned 20-million-dollar bond issue at competitive bidding rather than through private sales as proposed.

Halsey, Stuart said it sent a telegram from its New York office to the Baltimore utility and to all members of the Maryland Public Service Commission offering to bid at least the price agreed on privately, plus a company estimate of additional expenses that might be incurred.

Consolidated announced last week contracts had been signed for sale of the new 35-year first refunding mortgage sinking fund bond issue to several institutional investors. Under terms of the contracts, the bonds would be priced at 101.13 and carry a 2¾ percent coupon.

The Halsey, Stuart wire, addressed to William Schmidt, jr., president of Consolidated, said that if the company required "the proceeds of these bonds promptly, we are prepared to purchase them from yo aut any time at amount of our proposed minimum bid and to redeliver the bonds to highest bidder at subsequent competitive sale."

The utility's proposal to sell the bonds privately is subject to approval of its stockholders and the Maryland commission.

The commission has scheduled a hearing on the proposed private sale at 10 a. m. (EST) tomorrow in Baltimore. Charles B. Stuart, vice president of Halsey, Stuart, will represent his firm at the hearing.

End of Strike Boosts Steel Rate to 54%

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—The end of the strike at most of the Nation's steel mills boosted scheduled production this week to 54 percent of capacity, or 995,500 tons of ingots and castings.

The American Iron and Steel Institute gave the figures late today and pointed out it would be mid-week before all of the big U. S. Steel Corp. mills got under full headway.

The scheduled production compared with 21 percent of capacity, or 387,000 tons last week; 9.3 percent of capacity, or 172,000 tons a month ago, and 99 percent of capacity, or 1,784,500 tons a year ago.

New Zipper Borrows Automobile Designs

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—Scovill Manufacturing Co. of Waterbury, Conn., introduced today its new zipper incorporating structural designs borrowed from automobiles.

The company said it determined the causes for failure in zippers and designed "a trouble-free zipper that would outwear the item to which it was applied and simultaneously give manufacturers a zipper that is easier and more economical to apply."

For added strength, Scovill uses an X-shaped stop at the bottom of the zipper shaped like an automobile frame. At the same time the slide is made with a corrugated U-shape principle used in automobile bodies to withstand 10 times the pressure possible with ordinary construction, the company said.

Bond Stores' Sales Off

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—Bond Stores Inc. today reported October sales of $6,56 ,059, a decline of 28.2 percent from the $9,142,175 reported in October last year. The company listed sales of $65,369,135 for the first ten months this year, an increase of 1.2 per cent over last year's $64,615,969.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Nov. 14 (AP).—A gentle slide in wheat and lard provided the only price change of any importance on the Board of Trade today. In everything else final quotations were ½ cent or less removed from Saturday's finish.

Commission houses took only a small part in the market and there was little commercial activity. This left the trading mostly to local professional operators, who were inclined to be pessimistic about near-by wheat deliveries and optimistic about deferred corn deliveries.

Wheat ended ½-⅞ lower, corn was unchanged to ¼ higher, oats were unchanged to ½ higher, rye was unchanged to ½ higher, soybeans were ¼ lower to ½ higher and lard was 10 to 20 cents a hundred pounds lower.

Curb on Dogs Favored in Montgomery

The Montgomery County Civic Federation last night put itself solidly on record as favoring strict dog quarantine measures in areas of Montgomery and Prince Georges where at least nine children have been bitten in a recent outbreak of rabies.

The meeting, preliminary to a session of the Montgomery County Council today at which immediate quarantine orders will be sought, adopted two resolutions furthering the move.

The first asked that the council, sitting as the county board of health, the Maryland Livestock Sanitary Service, the Prince Georges County and District Health Departments "promptly adopt measures to contain and eradicate the recent outbreak in Takoma Park, Chillum and the Four Corners area."

The second urged all citizens "of areas now or later declared under quarantine for rabies strictly to observe quarantine provisions and cooperate fully in seeing that all dogs are vaccinated, and report cases (of rabies) immediately to the health department or the police."

Preliminary to the federation meeting, its public health committee, whose chairman, Allen B. Fay, introduced the resolutions, approved a report he later presented, declaring that "if epidemic rabies is to be avoided, every outbreak must be contained by strict quarantine, which includes destruction of strays and unwanted dogs, and the infection within the quarantine area eliminated by effective vaccination."

In another move, the federation amended a resolution adopted last month asking for a moratorium on issuance of building permits by the county council for apartment developments to include the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, since the latter body has the authority of issuance.

A report by Russell Whyte, chairman of the federation schools committee, declared the 68 Montgomery County institutions are carrying an overload of 5000 pupils or 3470 more than in 1948.

'Bonus' Asked In Home Sale, Suit Charges

A couple formerly residing at the Westmoreland, 2122 California st. nw., charged in a suit yesterday that its cooperative management is insisting on a $1000 "bonus" before permitting the sale of an apartment there.

The suit was filed in District Court by Donald W. and Irma C. McKone, against the Westmoreland Cooperative Corp.

The suit, brought through Attorney James A. Crooks, said that the McKones had an agreement for sale of their apartment at the Westmoreland to one John W. Addison for $13,000. Notice was given to the Westmoreland board of directors, the suit said, and it was agreed that Addison was acceptable for membership in the cooperative.

The management agreed to waive its contract right to repurchase of the apartment but then demanded $1000 above the purchase price, the suit says.

The McKones' suit charges that this was "an effort to exact a premium of bonus to obtain the acceptance of a prospective tenant as a cooperative member and resident."

The McKones ask a declaratory judgment stating their right to sell their apartment without making a payment to the cooperative management. They now live in Chevy Chase.

$67,000,000 Target Fixed By Red Cross

The American Red Cross yesterday set a 67-million-dollar campaign goal for the fiscal year beginning next July 1. It reaffirmed the policy of requiring all chapters to hold separate fund-raising campaigns, to start March 1.

The board of governors also made provision for local chapters to participate in certain industrial payroll deduction plans subject to specific conditions.

It confirmed an executive committee order that the Detroit chapter "shall not accept any funds allocated to it from the common funds collected by the Torch Fund campaign in Detroit."

The decisions were announced by Gen. George C. Marshall, national chairman.

The 67-million-dollar goal compares with $68,296,000 received from the public in the fiscal year which ended last June 30.

Marshall said the estimated cost of the program for fiscal 1951, beginning next July 1, actually is 79 million dollars; but 12 million dollars will be supplied "from the almost depleted surplus accumulated by oversubscriptions of previous campaigns, and by further economies to be effected nationally and locally."

Charge in 1936 Murder Dropped, Man Held Insane

A first-degree murder charge filed 13 years ago against Russell Moss, 63, was dismissed yesterday in District Court.

Assistant U. S. Attorney C. Frank Reifsnyder said the evidence was "overwhelming" that Moss was insane in 1936, when accused of slaying a 15-year-old girl at 1323 Half st. sw., where they both lived.

This summer, after spending 13 years in St. Elizabeths Hospital, he was released as recovered and sent to District Jail for trial.

Hammer Slayer Returned

Baton Rouge, La., Nov. 14 (AP).—John Barker has been returned to Maryland to face charges he beat his wife to death with a hammer.

Sheriff Bryan Clemmons said the 22-year-old father of two children was turned over yesterday to Sergt. W. R. May and Trooper N. K. Collison of the Maryland State Police.

Barker, arrested here November r3 on a vagrancy charge, signed a statement admitting he killed his 20-year-old wife with a hammer after she "nagged" him for two hours, Clemmons said. The slaying occurred in Maryland last August.

Farm Price Declines Cut Personal Incomes

Because farm prices were lower, total personal income of Americans dipped in September despite the first appreciable gain in factory payrolls this year.

The Commerce Department reported yesterday that personal income—backbone of consumer buying power—slipped to an annual rate of $210,800,000,000 in September from $211,400,000,000 in August.

The September rate also was well below the $216,300,000,000 pace of September, 1948, but 1949 was still leading 1948 on the average for the first nine months.

The 9-month average for this year amounted to an annual rate of $212,300,000,000 compared with $210,300,000,000 for the same months of last year.

The better average showing for 1949 was caused by a five-billion-dollar increase, on an annual rate basis, in nonfarm receipts, which include dividends and interests, landlords' rent receipts, pensions and relief palyments, and wages and salaries.

The lower prices for farm products brought a 13 percent decline in farm income for the first nine months of 1949 compared with the same period last year.

The same pattern was mirrored in the figures for September alone.

Nonfarm income was up one billion dollars—at an annual rate—in that month and at a peak for 1949. But farm income was down $1,600,000,000 "as the volume of crops and livestock marketed or placed under Government loan increased less than seasonally."

4 Receive Awards as Safe Drivers

Crosson | Steele | Redd | Marcey

Four truck and bus drivers, who have rolled up a joint total of 73 years without an accident, were given special awards yesterday at a ceremony in the office of George Keneipp, District director of motor vehicles and traffic.

They had been selected as "driver of the month" by the District of Columbia Trucking Association from June through September.

Each man received a gold wrist watch from the District of Columbia Trucking Association and a special certificate of merit from the American Trucking Association.

Eddie Redd, 48, of 918 20th st. nw., who has driven a tractor-semi trailer 21 years for the Powell Transfer Co., 1823 L st. nw., was chosen "driver of the month" for June.

July's driver is Earl Lee Marcey, 46, of 1101 N. Taylor st., Arlington, who drives a concrete mixer truck for the Super Concrete Corp. He has driven in the area since 1929.

Henry G. Steele, 51, of 415 Marietta pl. nw., a bus driver for Capital Transit Co., was "driver of the month" for August. A driver since 1939 he averages 83 miles a day.

The September choice was John C. Croson, 46, of McLean, Va. For the past 15 years he has been a driver for Thompson's Dairy.

Couple Walks To Death in California Surf

Half Moon Bay, Calif., Nov. 14. (U.P.)—The heavy Pacific surf today pounded over the bodies of a man and a woman who waded dramatically into a beautiful ocean sunset to meet death.

Hands linked, they walked chest-deep into the Pacific and vanished under the waves while horror-stricken spectators watched from the beach and from the seaside restaurant where the couple had just finished Sunday cocktails and dinner.

They were identified as former nurse Myrtle M. Porter, 47, and Ted Yelle, 50-year-old retired dry-cleaning operator.

Deputy Sheriff James Beatty of Pescadero said the couple paid no attention to the cry that went up from watchers along Martin's Beach. When a wave knocked the woman down, the man helped her up.

Water was churning to their chests when the sun sank into the ocean. A huge wave broke over the man and the woman and they were not seen again.

Nelson Eddy Thrills His Concert Fans

Two baritones provided music for Washington last night.

Nelson Eddy, accompanied by Theodore Paxson, filled Constitution Hall with thousands of admirers who frequently giggled and shrieked in happy ecstacy. This sort of thing has plagued Eddy for years and he is not always to blame for it.

Norman Farrow, Canadian-born baritone, sang in Phillips Gallery, accompanied by Dorothea Behm. There was no giggling, but the most solid kind of great music extremely well sung.

Farrow's program was the kind Eddy gave in his early years; four composers appeared on both programs: Schubert, Wolf, Debussy and Saint-Saens.

Eddy sang more than a dozen great songs, a good average for an artist whose public unjustly considers him no more than a clever entertainer. His voice was rather quiet most of the time but colored the texts of his songs at frequent intervals.

Nelson Eddy has done much to popularize great songs. But it seems a mistake to do so at the cost of vulgarizing the style of great Lieder. At the same time, Eddy was giving a literal translation of Brahms' "Vergebliche Staendchen" when he said it went, "Baby, it's cold outside." That's precisely what it does say.

His French group was uniformly excellent and the best singing we heard from him.

Farrow is a superb musician with a beautiful voice. His way with Bach arias is stunning. Absolute precision, immaculate style, and real excitement in delivery make his Bach almost unique among baritones of our knowledge.

The rest of his singing is too often the same—perhaps beautiful, but still needing brightness and a more personal conviction. But what a rare artist in a great program.

Cab Monopoly Reinstated By Airport

Airport Transport, Inc., has regained its monopoly on picking up fares at the National Airport.

This means that as of November 7 and from here on out, Washington and Virginia cab companies may not pick up passengers there.

Bennett Griffin, airport administrator, said yesterday that the new system, in effect now for about a week, has been a "great relief." He said it "seems to be working out very satisfactorily."

Regulations Cited

The new embargo on passenger pickup at the port went into effect because of what Griffin termed "total disregard" of outside cab companies for the regulations and procedures at the airport.

The question of who shall pick up fares at the airport has been up in the air almost since the field was opened.

At that time, the Federal Government decided a transportation concession was needed at the airport. It was awarded to Airport Transport, Inc. The contract was renew in 1945, and at present runs until June, 1951.

About two years ago, however, Airport Transport, which had held limousine (group riding to specified points) and taxicab rights, waived its exclusive taxi rights. This gave Washington and Virginia companies the right to move in and pick up fares.

Troubles Developed

Previously, companies away from the airport had only had discharge rights at the port.

But, Griffin said, the waiver brought troubles. Outside companies were assigned specific hack stands and stations. Instead, he said, many were guilty of soliciting fares "all over the airport." Other cabbies, instead of taking up assigned positions and awaiting their turn for fares, cruised over the grounds, Griffin said.

The arrangement was "so satisfactory," Griffin said, that the place "was in an uproar."

And there was no assurance at the airport that Washington cabs would be on hand on rainy nights, when their business chances were better downtown on a short haul basis, the airport administrator said.

So Griffin has signed the new order, and the status is the old quo. So far, Griffin said, there have been no complaints, except for one over the telephone from a man who refused to identify himself.

A Change in Timing

Have you ever heard yourself say, almost before your youngster has gotten inside the door, "Hang up your coat and hat, dear, won't you?" It's something that a lot of parents do—this business of premature checking up on their youngsters.

Probably we do it thinking that we'll save ourselves and the child a lot of trouble if we remind him what he should do right at the time he should be doing it. But the effect is bad on most children. Perhaps at times, they will drop the coat, forget to clean up after themselves, or otherwise not carry out what we expect of them. But they resent the hasty check-up.

There's little question but that a change in our timing will bring better results. Leaving responsibility up to the youngsters—not hastily reminding them of things to be done—and then very quietly suggesting that things need to be tended to if they do neglect them is a better approach.

Naturally, one cannot expect a 100 percent spic and span house all the time or a youngster that never neglects a responsibility. But the emotional atmosphere, the friendly warm feeling, that comes from a change in our timing will far outweigh the disadvantages of a little "sloppiness" or a not completely up-to-the-minute performance on the part of the youngster.

What's the Verdict?

TRAFFIC HABIT

Q. A person injured when a delivery truck ran through a red light sued the owner of the truck, for both compensatory and punitive damages. The ground of the latter claim was that the owner knew that the driver had a habit of running red lights. The injured man offers evidence of a former helper of the truck driver that he habitually ran red lights, and offers records of the police department that the driver had paid several fines for running red lights. Is this evidence admissible?

A. The issue is whether the company by knowingly employing a careless driver should be made to pay exemplary damages for having done so, to the injury of a third person. The testimony of the former helper is admissible as showing the driver's customary reaction when at a traffic-lighted intersection. The record of the fines, however, would be inadmissible unless there was some such foundation for it as a showing that the company had paid the fines or otherwise had specific knowledge of the fines and the conduct leading to them.

Each Day and Night

There is no greater joy for me . . . Than just to be with you . . . And share the dreams that both of us . . . Are hoping will come true . . . To see your smile and hold your hand . . . When stars are in the sky . . . And walk with you along the path . . . Where life is passing by . . . There is no song so sweet and soft . . . As when I kiss your loving lips . . . And hear you say good-night . . . I want to be beside you when . . . The night and morning meet . . . And all throughout the day until . . . The sun is in retreat . . . And all throughout the weeks and months . . . And seasons of the year . . . In every dream and memory . . . And every smile and tear.

Take Your Time, Gents; We'll All Live Longer

The operator of Capital Transit Car No. 1118, which made a left turn at 14th and Pennsylvania ave. nw. at 5:07 p. m. Sunday, should find the following paragraph highly informative:

A pedestrian in a crosswalk has the right-of-way over turning vehicular traffic when both are proceeding on a green light.

Many motorists are even worse offenders than streetcar operators. They plough right into a solid mass of humanity in making their turns, and expect everybody to get out of their way or be run down.

But anybody who has a license to drive is expected to be familiar with the law. Even when there's an arrow which permits specific turns, the pedestrian (unless confronted with a "Don't Walk" sign) has the right-of-way.

Unfortunately, that's little solace to the ones who get run over.

ONE-ACT PLAY

As the curtain goes up, we see a policeman standing beside a taxi, bawling out the driver a mile a minute. This goes on until the audience (and the hacker) can take no more. Then:

Hacker: Officer, I told you I was wrong, the offense was unintentional, and I'm sorry. If I'm going to get a ticket, for Pete's sake let me have it; but don't stand there abusing me for the rest of the day.

Policeman: Okay, buddy—you asked for it. Follow me to the station.

As the curtain falls, the policeman mounts his motorcycle and leads the cab driver off to the pokey. End of play.

Moral: The wronger a policeman is, the wiser it is for you to keep your mouth shut.

"I am a volunteer worker at the Montgomery Animal Shelter. We have a lovely spaniel who will be killed if not adopted soon. I'll pay the $2 fee for anybody who will give her a good home." (Mrs. E. A. Clark at SLigo 5183 during the day.)

MISCELLANY

Pepco is getting an increasing number of requests for information about the electric heating of homes, despite its warning that operating costs for electric heat are higher than for gas or fuel oil. Pat Ward of Hood College, Frederick, Md., says I'm too late with my warning that "All I Want for Christmas Is My Two Front Teeth" will soon be filling the airwaves. A Pennsylvania station started playing it a month ago. Mrs. Herbert Wolff of 3013 Ordway st. nw. reminds us that the Women's American ORT is giving a square dance at Pierce Hall, 16th and Harvard sts. nw., at 9 tonight. Tickets are $1 and all proceeds go to the United Jewish Appeal . . . Ida H. Peabody has a reminder for tomorrow and Thursday. St. Paul's Church, 417 Duke st., Alexandria, Va., will hold its third annual bazaar from 2 to 9 p. m. Wednesday and Thursday, with lots of Christmas gifts, dolls, aprons, dresses—plus home-made pickles made from an old Virginia recipe . . . Jim Wilfong, jr., weighs in with: "I'm furious. To whom can I complain? They've gone and put parking meters all around my hitching post at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church . . . Another bazaar for Wednesday and Thursday: Mrs. John H. Walther of 420 B st. ne. suggests you drop in at the First Congregational Church, 10th and G nw. They, too, will offer all sorts of things that will make fine Christmas gifts . . . Gene Cammer (she's a she) of 2829 28th st. nw. has been shopping all over town for "Ignacio, Haya, Gold Label" cigars (she copied it off a band, and it's none of your business WHO she's buying them for, so there) but can't find a cigar store that sells them. Can anybody help? . . . The Chicken Hut's rum pie is so delicious I've stopped worrying about how many calories there are in each slice.

COMPLAINT DEPT.

"Navy Prayer," forwarded by C. J. MacDonald and Frank Crim:

"Our Father, who art in Washington, Truman is thy name. The Navy's done; the Air Force won, on the Atlantic as in the Pacific. Give us this day our appropriations, and forgive us our accusations, as we forgive our accusers. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from Matthews and Johnson; for thine is the power and the B-36 and the Air Force forever and ever. Amen."

PARTY OF THE FIRST PART

Have you heard about the doctor, architect and lawyer who were arguing about which of them pursued the oldest profession?

The doctor contended that, inasmuch as Eve was made from Adam's rib—a surgical operation if ever there was one—medicine must surely rate as the oldest of the professions.

The architect disagreed. "Even before Adam and Eve," he pointed out, "the Lord fashioned a world out of chaos—and that, you'll have to admit, was an architectural job. I think my profession is the oldest."

The lawyer smiled triumphantly. "And who," he asked, "do you suppose supplied the chaos?"

with Aunt Penny

There was a big crowd at the market this morning. On top of that, two of the regular checking girls were a home, ill.

When the manager saw ho many people were standing i line waiting, he asked the girls who were packing groceries t take over as cashiers at the two vacant counters. That way, a lot more people were taken car of, sooner.

It reminded me of somethin; Cy Stubbs (one of the local telephone men) was saying the other day about the importance of sharing our telephone party lines.

He said that in spite of all the headway being made on the job of expanding the local telephone system, a lot of folks are still waiting for telephones. And party lines mean more service for more people, sooner. The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Company.

Merry-Go-Round

Downey Has His Troubles In California

By Drew Pearson

Los Angeles—John Kennedy, live-wire publisher of the San Diego Journal, recently took a man-in-the-street poll as to who represented California in the United States Senate. After some hesitation, most of those polled were able to remember the name of Republican William Knowland, who has been in office less than a full term, but almost none was able to remember the name of California's senior Senator, Sheridan Downey, now rounding out his twelfth year in the Senate.

Pearson

The political object lesson to be derived from Downey's anonymity is you can't be on every side of every issue and still keep the people's interest and respect.

In 1938 Sheridan Downey was elected as a new and flaming Liberal. The oldsters, the labor leadess, the small farmers rallied behind him. He promised them what they wanted and they believed him.

Becomes Senate "Mute"

Once elected, Downey went to Washington in a blaze of promises and expectations and simply sat. He took no vigorous stand on any issue. And it was only after many years as a Senate "mute" that the much-heralded gentleman from southern California finally got active. Believe it or not, his activity was then cast on the side of those who originally tried to defeat him.

Downey, for strange reasons best known to himself, came out on the side of the big ranchers and the big utilities.

Some attributed this weird about-face to his brother, an astute attorney who represents some of the big boys. Others attributed it to the idea that Sheridan knew Mr. Truman was sure to fail of reelection in 1948, so he, Sheridan, planned to bow out of the Senate and start practicing law for some of the big boys himself.

At any rate, the Senator from California became a more rabid spokesman for the big land owners than anyone else in the Senate, even publishing a luxurious book on reclamation that had little sale, and which could not have been financed very easily from a Senator's salary.

Threatened Block

Most people didn't know it but, at the wind-up of Congress last month, Downey threatened to block adjournment with a filibuster if the Senate voted salaries to his twin enemies, Reclamation Commissioner Mike Straus and Regional Deputy Richard Boke.

For some time Downey has intimated that Commissioner Straus should not enforce the 160-acre limitation on land irrigated by the Federal Government. Unable to get Congress to abandon the 160-acre limitation, Downey didn't want the law enforced. And when Straus and Boke insisted on enforcement, he succeeded in sneaking a rider through the Republican-controlled Eightieth Congress cutting off their salaries.

Later, the Democratic Eighty-first Congress put back the salaries and even voted to restore five months' back pay. And it was that that caused Sheridan to gnash his teeth and threatened a filibuster. Downey made such fierce and ferocious noises that kindly Senator Carl Hayden of Arizona, in a closed-door conference of Senate and House committees, begged that the salary issue be postponed until January.

"If not, Downey will filibuster and keep us here for weeks," Hayden urged.

"You don't know Downey," snorted Congressman Mike Kirwan of Youngstown, Ohio. "He hasn't got the guts. He talks big but runs out when you say boo at him. The Supreme Court has already held in the cases of Lovett, Dodd and Watson that these back salaries are payable. We also have a legal opinion from Lindsay Warren, the Controller General, telling us that Straus and Boke have an even stronger case. I, for one, refuse to be bluffed by Sheridan Downey."

Congressman Kirwan was right. The conference committee restored the back salaries of Downey's mortal enemies, and the Senator from California did not filibuster.

Desperate for Reelection

Today Senator Downey has changed his mind again; has decided there's life in the Democratic Party yet, and is running for reelection. In fact, he's running desperately. His opponent is one of the ablest members of Congress, Mrs. Helen Gahagan Douglas. And Sheridan knows that this time he can't count on the oldsters, the small farmers and labor.

He can count on thousands of dollars of campaign contributions from the utilities and the big ranchers. But that will be in the primary. For if Downey by some miracle squeaks through the primary, the big boys will vote against him in the final election and for a Republican. For they, like so many others, in California, have no respect for both-sides-of-the-fence Sheridan Downey.
